These figures interest newspaper publishers, especially those that use International News Service features. Government reports of circulation in New York show that every evening newspaper lost circulation except the Evening Journal, which gained more than 10,000 in the six months preceding October 1, 1921. The Evening Journal circulation is 683,683. The circulation of its nearest competitor is 293,871. While the Evening Journal gained 10,000, that nearest competitor lost more than 61,000. Thus these New York Evening Journal has double the circulation of its nearest evening competitor, plus 83,341. The Evening Journal's daily circulation, largest in America, sells at three cents. The display advertising in the Evening Journal compared with last year has thus far gained 2,500 columns in 1921. Publishers will observe with interest that many things are possible in spite of less prosperous times.

No progress to report in the railroad strike, unfortunately. Various boards and wise men have been talking. Their unsatisfactory reports: "It's up to Harding." In reality it is up to the public, the railroad owners and, especially, up to the workmen. Whatever happens Mr. Harding will travel. The government will see to that. But what about the workers who are told to walk out? Will it be easy for them to walk in?

Advice not asked is never welcome. But one who has usually supported workmen in their strikes, through publicity, for nearly forty years, may properly give them this earnest warning:

If the men go out they will lose. The entire power of the government, plus irritated public opinion, plus the eagerness of five or six million men to take their jobs, will be against them.

If the men themselves, not merely a few leaders, consider a strike absolutely necessary, that is for them to decide, but it is at least 10 to 1 that if this strike comes, it will fail, and if it fails, the railroads will be put on an "open shop" basis, for that is the owners' plan. Workers are invited to remember this prediction.

Appeal to women: Please, will you do yourselves, the entire human race and the general health a great favor? Don't let the dressmakers lengthen your skirts. Don't hurt business by refusing to buy what is put before you, but if they parade you to take a long skirt, take it home, shorten it, and give the pieces to your little girl to make dolls' dresses. Fashion has set your legs free. Don't let fashion make slaves of them again. The Chinese women recently got rid of tight shoes. You could not persuade those women to go back to tortured feet. Don't go back to long skirts that collect dust, hamper your movements and take away half your grace.

Man is by nature unreasonable; every woman knows it. Which is the most unreasonable man in history thus far? You probably couldn't guess, not having heard of him. His name is Roland Phillips, he lives in Detroit and appeared before the judge the third time to explain why he had beaten his wife. He beat her, said he, and severely, because she was out waiting at the jail gate to greet him when he was set free. Caesar was unreasonable. Who can avoid suspicion? Othello was brutal; Hinebeard was capricious. Roland Phillips of Detroit is the champion.

Armistice Day, Friday, November 11, will be observed throughout Canada with two minutes of silence at 11 o'clock in the morning. It would be better observed with about ten hours' hard work for everybody. That's what the world needs more than two minutes of silence. There has been enough silence and enough doing nothing since Armistice Day first came along.

The Irish situation, with Sinn Fein courts trying Englishmen in Ireland, taking possession of property, etc., makes you think that England is getting old. The Celts of Ireland that were fighting all through the Balkans, down into Spain and Greece, 2,000 years ago, seem to have retained their youth and energy. If England were still the England of Cromwell's day and had another Cromwell, the Irish affair would be different. It looks as though freedom were really coming after 700 years of fighting.

It is nice to have the "American Unknown Soldier" highly honored. The King sends a Victoria Cross to our unknown. We thank King George, of course. This country spends thousands sending across the ocean to honor other "unknown dead." Nothing could be prettier except, perhaps, a little interest in the perfectly well known American soldiers wounded and surviving or deprived of their work by service in the army.

BLUENOSE WINS SCHOONER RACE

MAST OF AMERICAN DEFENDER BREAKS

Elsie Continues in Spite of Accident; Time for Course Is 4½ Hours

Halifax, Oct. 22.—The Canadian schooner Bluenose won the first race of the International Fishermen's championship contest from the Gloucester schooner Elsie today. The time of the Bluenose for the course was 4 hours and 30 minutes.

By Associated Press

Halifax, Oct. 22.—The foretopmast of the schooner Elsie of Gloucester was carried away today on the fourth leg of her first race with Bluenose of Lunenburg for the sailing championship of the North Atlantic.

The accident occurred while the Bluenose was leading by about two minutes after half of course had been covered. Heaten on the first three legs after having been first to cross the line, Captain Marty Welch was hoping to capture the lead on the last two stretches of windward work.

When the crash came, Bluenose was outfooling her rival, but Elsie seemed to be pointing better. Apparently taking warning from the Yankees' mishap, the Nova Scotian at once hauled down her balloon jib.

American rooters were worrying that Elsie's other top mast also would be carried away, for this stick had been badly strained on the trip up from Gloucester. Captain Welch had thought of refitting it, but decided to

RADICALS APPEAL TO HARDING

European Communists Ask President to Have Sacco-Vanzetti Verdict Set Aside

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 22.—European Communists striving to effect the release of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted of murder in Massachusetts, today carried their protests to President Harding. The president received cablegrams from Marcel Fallioy, voicing the protests of 2,000 Belgian Communists of Charleroi, and From Rolland Henry Varbusse, appealing on behalf of Parisian Communists for the president "to obey his good impulses" and "soften the punishment" of the two men. No action has yet been taken by the White House.

Hearing of arguments on the motions for new trials for Nicolo Sacco and Bartolmeo Vanzetti, convicted of the murder of a South Braintree paymaster and guard, was deferred until next Saturday by Judge Webster Thayer today after defence counsel asserted they had not yet had sufficient time to review the 4,000 pages of evidence.

Both of the defendants will be allowed to be present at the hearings if they desire. In case the men wish to be present the hearings will be held at Dedham; otherwise, they will take place in the Suffolk County courthouse in Boston.

Judge Thayer, in granting a week's delay to defence Attorneys J. J. McAnarney and Frederick H. Moore, also allowed them a month's extension of time in the filing of a bill of exceptions with the Supreme Judicial Court. The time originally set was November 1.

Although he declared that the defendants should be given every reasonable safeguard in the matter of appeals, Judge Thayer insisted that the matter be disposed of at as early a date as possible in view of the widespread agitation both here and abroad, which the cases have aroused.

He pointed out, in passing, that he had sent out the notices calling for

SINN FEIN TO CONFER ON CRISIS

Collins Leaves London as Debate Rages Over De Valera's Note to Pope

By International News Service.

Dublin, Oct. 22.—A general conference on the critical new situation in the peace negotiations will be held here tomorrow with Eamon De Valera presiding. Leaders of Dail Eireann and the Sinn Fein Cabinet will participate. Michael Collins and a number of Sinn Fein advisers and experts have come from London. Desmond Fitzgerald, in charge of publicity of the Irish peace delegation, will come to Dublin tonight.

London, Oct. 22 (By the Associated Press).—Michael Collins, Finance Minister of the Dail Eireann and delegate to the conference here with British government officials looking to a settlement of the Irish question, left London for Dublin today.

It was stated he was going to Ireland on private business, but, in the light of the crisis which was reached in the conference negotiations yesterday, it was regarded as probable in political quarters that the chief reason was a desire to see Eamon de Valera and inform him of the effect his unexpected telegram to Pope Benedict had produced.

It was reported that the Sinn Fein had been asked by the government representatives for assurances that the question of a republic in Ireland

Orders Freight Rates Cut at Once

By Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 22.—In a sweeping decision involving the entire railroad situation, wage scales, depression in industry and finances, the Interstate Commerce Commission today ordered freight rates on grain, grain products and hay throughout the western half of the United States reduced by an average of approximately 16 per cent.

Notice was given the carriers that the commission expected the reductions to be put into effect immediately and by November 26 at the latest, and that the low state of railroad earnings, which led to the increases in 1920, should hereafter be rectified by reductions in wages and prices and that a downward tendency should be set for their rates.

BOSTON GIRL HELD FOR NORTH ADAMS THEFT

North Arama, Oct. 22.—When C. T. and Mrs. Gusthing of Southworth street, Williamstown, returned from a Williams College faculty dance they found the baby crying in its nursery and their new nursemaid whom they knew as Emma Howard, 20 years old, nowhere to be found. A further search revealed that furs, diamonds, coats, dresses, toilet articles and cash to the value of $3,500 was missing. The woman was found in North Adams registered at the Wellington Hotel as Ella E Davis of Boston. She was arrested, charged with larceny.

TO DEMAND MEN STAY ON JOB

Courts Will Be Appealed to, If Necessary, to Prevent Railway Walkout

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 22.—President Harding, having placed the responsibility for averting the threatened transportation tieup squarely upon the shoulders of the United States Railroad Labor Board, today entered upon a "watchful waiting" policy, which will continue until a decision is reached in the anti-strike conference which opens Wednesday in Chicago.

The Railroad Labor Board will insist that the railway executives agree to withhold their demand for further wage reductions, and that the chiefs of the "Big Four" transportation brotherhoods withdraw their orders for a progressive walkout to begin October 30.

Failure of the Labor Board to secure concessions from the contending groups probably would be followed by the shifting of the controversy to the United States Board of Education

FIREMEN FIGHT BLAZE IN SOUTH END HOTEL

Ladder Company No. 17 and Engine Company No. 26 were called early today to a fire in the basement of the New Richwood Hotel, Tremont street. The flames were quickly put under control and the 100 guests in the building were not required to leave their rooms. The fire, which did damage estimated at $500, is believed to have been caused by an overheated stove pipe.

RAILWAY LABOR BOARD DETERMINED TO RULE IN STRIKE CRISIS

COURTS MAY BE APPEALED TO IF UNIONS GO OUT

and Conciliation, a bureau of the Department of Labor.

The national defence act, which remains in effect until the formal declaration of peace, and other drastic wartime laws, will not be invoked by the President to prevent an interruption of interstate commerce in the event of a strike. If it becomes imperative for the government to act through the courts to keep food, fuel and other necessaries moving, only civil laws, such as the injunction, would be used.

Governmental departments will proceed with plans for maintaining partial transportation facilities and the movement of the mails, if all efforts to halt the strike should prove futile.

To escape the official condemnation of the Labor Board, for alleged violation of the wage fixing provisions of the Esch-Cummins act, both the railway executives and the labor leaders will find it incumbent upon them to accept the board's view of their relations in the present crisis. It is the administration's view that neither side can continue to flout the authority of the board.

The formal presentation of the attitude of the government to the brotherhood chiefs will give the labor leaders sufficient cause, officials believe, to call off the strike.

Road Executives Cease Preparing for Strike

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Keen interest was being taken here in whether the railroad and the union leaders would comply strictly with the orders of the United States Railway Labor Board to maintain strike affairs in their present status or would flout the authority of the board, and proceed with strike plans.

The order of the board yesterday, which cited both the rail chiefs and the union leaders to appear next Wednesday for a hearing on whether the recent wage cut decision of the board is being violated through the calling of a strike virtually forbade the strike. It likewise is tantamount to an order that no further plans for the strike, scheduled for October 30, shall be forthcoming.

It directs both the railroads and unions to maintain the "status quo."

Executives of the railroads have announced that they will drop all plans for combating the strike and await the outcome of the conference Wednesday. The meeting of the Western railroad executives here voted compliance with the board's order.

Heads of the brotherhoods also, according to reports from Cleveland, have declared that they will comply with the situation of the hour, but there were reports in railroad circles that the brotherhood chiefs did not intend to have completely lost the strike plans, which they have been formulating since the failure of their conference with the Labor Board here Thursday to avert the strike.

The only indication of defiance on the part of the railroads was seen in the action of the Pittsburgh and Lake railroad, a sixty-six-mile logging line in Louisiana, of which Joshua Cosden, the Chicago millionaire, who is being sued by Peggy Hopkins Joyce, is the president.

This road placed an "open shop order in effect last night. The Labor Board peremptorily ordered cancellation of the open shop plan.

There was a disposition in official circles here today, to be optimistic with regard to the latest move of the Labor Board to avert the strike. It was pointed out that the board has authority to summon before it at any time whomever it pleases and failure to comply is punishable by contempt of court proceedings.

It was believed that the action of the board in calling the union chiefs and the rail heads before it paved the way for court proceedings to halt the strike, in the event union chiefs cannot be persuaded to rescind the strike order.

Chicago Sees Hope of Peaceful Settlement

Chicago, Oct. 22 (by the Associated Press).—Hope for a peaceful settlement of the national transportation crisis were brighter today with the agreement of rail executives and brotherhood strike leaders to respond to the summons of the Labor Board for an open conference here next Wednesday on the wage and working-rules dispute.

While brotherhood chiefs, in conference at Cleveland, stated their willingness to meet the executives and the board, it was indicated they had made no plans for suspending the strike plans pending the negotiations.

S. M. Felton, president of the Chicago Great Western and chairman at the meeting of Western executives here yesterday, declared the executives would obey not only the order to appear for the conference, but also the board's order that the situation remain unchanged pending the conference and the board's decision resulting from it.

Measures to combat the strike will be abandoned, he said, until the hearing, but advertisements to fill the places of strikers appeared today in newspapers.

Traffic League Backs Railways in Strike

The following letter to each of the New England railroad executives was sent this afternoon by W. H. Chandler, president of the New England Traffic League, and manager of the transportation department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

"The New England Traffic League, recognizing the serious transportation conditions with which the country is confronted and the fundamental principles which are involved, wishes to assure the New England carriers of its unqualified support if a general strike of railroad employes materializes. The league realizes the fact that the country's industries are dependent upon transportation for their existence and, in the event of a strike, assures you that its members will give every support to the New England carriers in their endeavors to maintain railroad operation and bear with patience any inconveniences, suffering and hardships that may follow."

The New England Traffic League is an organization of traffic managers representing practically all the large industries of New England.

Chamber Asks Volunteers for Strike Duty

Declaring that "the arteries of transportation must and shall be open and the necessaries of life must continue to be available for our citizens," the directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce last night issued an appeal to the members of the chamber and to the public generally calling for the enrollment of volunteers to meet the emergency which will arise if the strike goes into effect.

THREE CAUGHT IN GUN CHASE IN SAUGUS

After a gun chase along Lincoln avenue, East Saugus, Joseph H. Buckley, 25 years old, of North Federal street, Lynn, and Joseph E. Gilroy, 37 years old of Cottage street, Lynn and Arthur J. McKenna, 20, son of Chief Pinkham of Lynn, were captured today and arraigned before Trial Justice Ludden in Saugus. William B. Siegel of Lynn declared that the men had attempted to hold up him and his companion, Gideon M. Libby, but the court found no evidence of this and fined all three $10 for being intoxicated, and in addition fined Buckley $100 for operating an auto while under the influence of liquor. Buckley is the son of John H. Buckley, famous oarsman of a quarter of a century ago.

NEW 'STUNT' BY SIMMONS GIRLS AIDS FUND

400 Students Take Part in Stunt to Swell Campaign Total, Now $310,000

Under the direction of Miss Jessie Moore, president of the Boston Simmons Club, 400 Simmons College girls stationed themselves in the lobbies and corridors of half a hundred office buildings, the North, South and Back Bay Stations, and on the principal street corners of the city today to sell 40,000 lead pencils and increase the grand total of the college fund which now stands at $310,000.

Twenty "captains" who are members of the Boston Simmons Club had actual charge of the selling of the pencils and directed teams of ten girls each.

Two hundred of these girls, undergraduates at the college reported for duty at 5 o'clock in the morning and another group of 200 sold the pencils in the afternoon.

Miss Sylvia Warren, of Beacon street, and the twenty-five society girls, who have been assisting her in the Simmons canvass of the Back Bay district, had been invited to take part in "Pencil Day."

The afternoon program for the sale included stationing scores of girls at the gates of Braves Field and the stadium to meet the football crowd and others at Massachusetts and Commonwealth avenues, where they greeted homeward bound motorists with wind aniield stickers as well as pencils.

All the college girls wore yellow sashes with "Simmons College" in blue stamped upon them.

Sentence was then revised to a $100 fine. Palmisano was charged with carrying a dirk knife.

BLUENOSE WINS BIG RACE OFF HALIFAX

ELSIE REPTURES TO QUIT.

It is perfectly good racing etiquette for Bluenose to continue its fight despite the accident to her rival, because a race is intended also as a test of a boat's seaworthiness.

In the America's cup races off Sandy Hook last year Shamrock continued on to the finish line after Resolute had snapped her throd halyard and had been forced to withdraw from the race.

With the stiff twenty-five-mile wind still blowing and rough, squalls lifting her every few minutes, Elsie continued gamely, refusing to withdraw. Her crew could be seen scurrying around the deck, hauling down her stay sail and cutting away the wreckage. Observers estimated that the Nova Scotian had increased her lead to half a mile.

A REAL TEST.

It was a real race—no dainty, white flanneled affair.

Bluenose apparently was playing safe, for, gripped by a stiff squall, she promptly clewed u her mainsail and was bolling along under four lowers. She was laying well over, with her scuppers awash.

At 11:43 Elsie came about, followed a minute later by Bluenose. Both were heading to leeward of the mark. Captain Marty Welch showed that it took more than a lost topmast to worry him, for whereas his rival had stripped down to lowers in a wind which increased to 30 to 35 knots, the Yankee skipper kept his mainsheet taut, staking his all on the already strained stick standing the blow.

BLUENOSE REDUCES CANVAS.

The increasing wind worked in the Yankee's favor, for the Bluenose, in hauling down her upper sails, reduced herself to the same canvas carrying capacity as the American, which apparently was holding the loss of her foretop no hndicp.

The Gloucester schooner Elsie led the Nova Scotia schooner Bluenose by a length in crossing the starting line. The official starting times were:

Elsie 9:00:16.

Bluenose 9:00:48.

Bluenose captured the first leg, however, and the initial mark at 9:32:50, with the Elsie following at 9:33:28.

A twenty-five knot wind from the northwest greeted Elsie and Bluenose when they put out from their docks.

They carried four lower sails and maintop sails as they cruised about back of the starting line, fifteen minutes before the preparatory gun was fired.

FLIES STARS AND STRIPES.

The signal flown from the breakwater on the starting line indicated that No. 3 course had been chosen. This meant a reach of six miles to the inner automatic buoy off Cherbuto Head, a run down the wind of six miles to the southeast; automatic a reach of nine miles to Sha Head bell, a dead beat of twelve miles to inner automatic, with another six miles of windward work on the race to the finish line.

Elsie, the Gloucesterman, with the Stars and Stripes flying at her main peak, increased her lead to 150 yards after crossing the starting line. Bluenose seemed to be making heavier weather in the fresh breeze. Both schooners were carrying all sail.

BLUENOSE TAKES LEAD.

Captain Angus Walters tried to capture the wealthy Gloucester by Vanpee rival, but Marty Welch prevented him. At 9:38 both schooners swung off for the first leg, Elsie creeping up foot by foot and passing the Americans nose sticker just before turning the mark.

Passing the first buoy 150 yards in the lead, Elsie sheered off on the for a six-mile broad reach to the southeast automatic. Bustling along in a choppy sea, Elsie had drawn up on Bluenose's weather quarter at 9:47, when, at 10 o'clock, when the schooners were less than two miles from the second mark, Elsie was running neck and neck with the Nova Scotian, after having at one time been 150 yards behind at the second leg.

Bluenose captured the weather position at 10:05, when, with the schooners nine miles to the first mark, both schoners doused their fore topsails, hybed and headed for the buoy with the wind on the beam.

Bluenose turned the second mark with a lead of 200 yards. The official times were: Bluenose 10:19:29; Elsie 10:11:02.

MARK OF 10 KNOTS.

After rounding the second mark, Bluenose at 10:30 had increased her lead to more than 500 yards. The wind had dropped to 20 knots and both schooners, with fore topsails and staysails, appeared to be doing 10 knots. Bluenose headed more easily to squalls.

At 9:40 the Nova Scotian had further increased her lead. Each schooner had set a jib topsail and were easily able to pick out the buoy less than a two-mile away.

The official turning times for the third mark were: Bluenose 10:42:18; Elsie 10:34:02. On rounding the last Bluenose hauled by the wind on the port tack.

Bluenose, which had clewed up her fortopsail, came about on the starboard tack. The American doused her staysails and came about to windward of Bluenose. Then the schooners settled down for the long windward stretch, the supreme test of the race.

CHARLES ON WAY TO BUDAPEST WITH TROOPS

Entente Informed of Former Emperor's Flight by Plane From Switzerland

Paris, Oct. 22.—The Hungarian government will act as it did on the occasion of the previous attempt of former Emperor Charles to resume the throne in Hungary, according to information obtained here today, and will take measures to expel the former monarch from Hungarian territory, it is declared.

Vienna, Oct. 22 (By the Associated Press).—Former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary arrived at Oedenburg, Burgenland, Friday afternoon in an airplane from Switzerland, according to an Oedenburg message today, and is reported to be proceeding towards Budapest, escorted by troops.

A provisional government, the advices state, has been formed in Burgenland, in the ex-Emperor's interest, under Count Julius Andrassy, former Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister.

PROCLAIMED KING.

A message which reached the entente mission here this forenoon confirmed the advices that former Emperor Charles had arrived at Oedenburg in an airplane. This message placed the time of his arrival at Thursday afternoon.

The Oestenburg forces immediately went over to Charles upon his arrival at Oedenburg, and he was proclaimed king, according to one message.

Other advices say Charles reached that town at 1:30 p. m., Friday, flying over Southern Bavaria and then across Austria.

The railways and telephone and telegraph lines have been cut at the Hungarian frontier.

SITUATION TENSE.

The situation in Vienna is tense, it is rumored here that the Czechs are mobilizing.

The Austrian Government announced this forenoon that all precautions had been taken to deal with the situation. The entire police force and the city guards, including the reserves, were called out, and extra ammunition was dispatched to the frontier forces.

Political observers believe that the activities supporters of the ex-Emperor will suspend any action in his behalf on Austrian territory pending a decisive outcome of his venture into Hungary.

The district of Burgenland is disputed territory between Austria and Hungary. It was awarded to Austria, but was occupied some months ago by the Hungarian irregular troops.

At a conference in Venice last week, it was decided Burgenland should be turned over to Austria, but that Odenburg and its surrounding district should hold a plebiscite which would decide the future status of that immediate territory.

Hungarian leaders, particularly former Premier Friedrich, declared they would not withdraw the Hungarian troops in the district.

Behind the attempt of the Hungarians to retain possession of Burgenland there has been the threat of a return to West Hungary of former Emperor Charles.

be eliminated from the conference discussions.

Another rupture of the Irish conference, a general political crisis in England and the reconstitution of Premier Lloyd George's visit to Washington were featured by London newspapers this morning.

It appeared that the telegram sent to Pope Benedict by De Valera, in which there was adverse criticism of King George's recent message to the Pontiff, was considered a phase of the situation which jeopardized continuance of the negotiations for peace in Ireland.

Editorials on Mr De Valera's message varied from bre denunciation to sorrowful regret.

The Daily News, one of Mr. De Valera's warmest supporters, said: "This mischievous proclamation is a characteristic example of the activities of the evil genius who appears usually to preside over Irish affairs."

Hope that De Valera's real intentions would "prove wiser than his formal letter was expressed by the Daily Chronicle, a staunch supporter of Mr. Lloyd George, which declared its confidence in the Prime Minister that "exhaust every resource of wise patience before abandoning the attempt to attain peace."

The Socialist view, as expressed by the Daily Herald, was that King George's began the latest controversy by referring to the Irish as "my people" in his letter to Pope Benedict.

The newspaper asserts it was only natural that Mr. De Valera should resent what he had been given already by his telegram to Rome.

The point was made at Sinn Fein headquarters this afternoon that Mr. de Valera had said nothing in his telegram to the Pope that he did not say in his correspondence with Premier Lloyd George while the latter was at Inverness.

It is believed in some quarters that an interchange of notes will take place during the week-end between the Irish and British plenipotentiaries here.

Woman Arrested After Bomb Throwing in Paris

By International News Service.

The arrest of a woman Communist, in connection with the bomb outrage at Wagram Hall during an anti-American mass meeting, has led to important revelations, which may throw light upon the attempt to assassinate Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador, the Petit Parisien stated today.

Following the woman's arrest, her home was searched and the police found a number of important documents which had been exchanged by the leaders of the Communist group. The police refused to reveal the contents of the papers.

So far, however, no arrest has been made on the direct charge of attempting to murder the American diplomat. The police have diligently probed the haunts of Communists and Anarchists and many well-known Reds have been questioned.

Practically, all the Communists con'end that the bomb outrage at the home of the American Ambassador was the work of an individual, and not part of a general European "terrorist plot" to frighten American diplomats into demanding that their government release the two Italians in Massachusetts, whose conviction on a murder charge brought about the agitation—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Fifteen Hurt by Grenade Thrown at Red Meeting

By Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 22.—French Communists who met at a hall in Wagram avenue passed a resolution that a demonstration would be held on Sunday before the American embassy here in protest against the sentence of death pronounced in a Massachusetts court upon two Italians, Nicola Sacco and Vanzetti, two Italians convicted of murder.

Newspapers of this city declared this morning, however, that the demonstration probably would be forbidden.

Fifteen persons were wounded by the explosion of a bomb thrown into a squad of police who were attempting to disperse a crowd near the hall where the meeting was held. Of those injured twelve are said by the Journal to have been policemen. The bomb was of the same type as that sent to Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, last Wednesday.

MRS. PAUL ASKS DIVORCE FOR CRUELTY

Mrs. Grace H. Paul, Watertown society woman, has brought suit for divorce from Edward J. Paul of No. 43 Spruce street, Watertown, charging cruel and abusive treatment.

The filing of the suit has caused more than a ripple of surprise in Watertown, Waltham, Newton and Brookline, where the parties are well known.

Mrs. Paul has been one of the most popular young matrons of Watertown and has been prominent in parents and spectacles put on there for various civic or charitable cause.

The Pauls were married in Watertown January 5, 1916.

MADMAN KILLS WATCHMAN AT ASYLUM

became suddenly violent today, but Night Watchman Alfred Wilp to death with a poker and ran amuck through the institution until he was overpowered by a dozen guards, doctors and nurses.

When he was finally restrained he shouted: "This man has been interfering with me for twenty years."

Hayward has been at the colony for only four years and had little or nothing to do with Wilp.

Dr. George M. Kline of the State Department of Mental Diseases diagnosed the cause of the killing as a sudden change on Hayward's part from mild insanity to dementia precox, a violent form of mental trouble.

Hayward is about forty years old and the man he killed was fifty-three and had been a night watchman at the Borden Colony for fifteen years.

The slayer was admitted to the State Hospital from Whitman and was almost immediately transferred to the Borden Colony as a comparatively harmless case.

Night Watchman Wilp had just completed his rounds and was preparing to go off duty when Hayward charged at him, brandishing the poker.

The man's complete change of nature was so sudden and dramatic that it astounded the attendant and placed him at a disadvantage in the furious struggle that followed.

Hayward seemed endowed with superhuman strength and had battered and mauled his victim until he was overpowered by a dozen guards, doctors and nurses.

The slayer was taken to the hospital prison.

CAUSTIC REPLY SENT TO ALLEN BY PELLETIER

Declares Decency Ought to Impel Attorney-General to Let Him Know Charges

District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier has sent the following letter to Attorney-General Allen in answer to the one received by him, in which Allen declines to give Pelletier a copy of the Bar Association charges against him.

The letter:

"I note from your letter that you decline to give me the information I sought as to the charges against me.

NEVER REFUSED INFORMATION.

"As District Attorney I never refused such information or a hearing to any person asking same, no matter how weak the case.

"I had in mind that you would approciate that considerations of decency and the public welfare would suggest to you that when charges were made against a public official by private persons, you would inform the public official of the nature of the charges in order to ascertain whether he had an answer to them. Respect for the office, if you had none for me, ought to suggest this course.

"In your answer you go out of your way to criticise me for not appearing before a committee of the Bar Association. In declining to go before them I said that the charges were a matter of political enmity and that I held the committee down cold, my statement as to my accusers.

"When, may I ask, has the Bar Association been clothed by law with authority to sit in judgment on a district attorney, an elected official of the people?"

District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier told a secret meeting of his supporters he had a campaign managers at No. 219 Washington street, that he had burned all his bridges and would not consider withdrawing his name from the candidacy for Mayor of Boston.

Dr. Henneberg was ordered by Dr. McCarthy of Blue Hill Parkway, after which the girl was rushed to the City Hospital where she was immediately placed on the danger list.

FAVOR STATEN ISLAND TO BROOKLYN TUNNEL

New York, Oct. 22.—The construction of a passenger and freight tunnel from Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, to Staten Island and a belt railroad line around the island was favored by a committee report of the Board of Estimate. The tunnel would cost $11,000,000. The line would cost $141,000,000. The belt line would start at Haworth, N. J., on the west side of the Hudson and run via Paterson, Short Hills, Summit, Scotch Plains and Metuchen to Perth Amboy, thence to the Staten Island by a high level viaduct through the tunnel to Brooklyn.

ESCAPED MURDERER IS BACK AT BRIDGEWATER

BROCKTON GIRL OF 18 TELLS OF HER LONG HIKE DRESSED AS BOY

HELD FOR FATHER AT PORTLAND

Portland, Me., Oct. 22.—Mary Ruth Haley's vacation in boy's clothing is over and she is held at police headquarters for the arrival of her father, John W. Haley of No. 25 Spring avenue, Brockton, with her own clothes, before starting back for Brockton. A stubborn child charged confronts her at home.

But, while her "thing" lasted, she had a "whale of a time," according to her own statement to the police matron at headquarters here.

It began a little more than a month ago, when the eighteen-year-old graduate of Brockton High School got tired of wearing skirts and the monotonous existence at home, and with a girl companion togged herself out in boys' clothes, bobbed her hair and started off to see the world.

IMITATES HER BROTHER.

Her plans included a tour through New England, such as had been taken some time before by her older brother. She felt that she was able to stand the physical strain, for she was an accomplished athlete, a basketball player and had even aspired to playing baseball.

So she and her girl chum hiked off to a camp at North Reading, Mass., where they stayed for a couple of days. Then they began their tramp, getting many a lift on the road from friendly autoists, and sleeping in barns and deserted houses.

"It did not take much money to be comfortable and to enjoy life that way," she told the matron.

After ten days of this they got to Topsham and "took in" the fair there, after which her chum decided she had had enough and went back home.

Mary's appetite for wandering, however, was still keen and she kept right on hiking.

TELLS HER OWN STORY.

"People are awfully good if you'll only let them be so," she explained in telling of her adventures.

"Everywhere I went I was kindly treated and by folks who were total strangers to me."

Only once did she get into trouble, and that was when a tipsy man attempted to pick a quarrel with her. In spite of her boy's clothes, Mary decided that discretion was the better part of valor and fled.

When she gets home she is likely to have to face court as a stubborn child, a warrant having been issued for her arrest on that charge in Brockton.

She laughs at this as well as at stories told of the various places she has been since leaving home.

One of these reports sent the police of Boston, scurrying to a Harrison street Chinese restaurant, but when they arrived there was no sign of Mary.

The girl is remarkably well developed physically, and is as strong as many a boy of her age. She is more than usually pretty, and the boy's costume she wears is very becoming.

SPECULATORS IN MARKS BUSY IN BUENOS AIRES

Buenos Aires, Oct. 22.—German marks have fallen in value here until they are far cheaper than eggs or oranges. Rich and poor alike are crowding banks in this city, specializing in buying and selling German money. The crowds were so great in some banks yesterday that the institutions' staffs had difficulty in handling business.

New York, Oct. 22.—Mary Garden came back to America today, but all of her hair didn't. She left some of it in Paris, where a barber bobbed her locks.

"Is it true that the Chicago Opera Company is going broke?" was one of the first questions asked.

"I should say not," she replied. "There are 500 citizens there who have subscribed $5,000 each."

Asked if she got married in Europe the diva laughed.

"No," she said, "but I had my horoscope read and discovered that I am to be married in 1924."

TARTOUE CHARGE AGAINST WIFE CORROBORATED

Mrs. Busch Claims Her Husband Is Still Legally Tied to Artist's Mate

New York, Oct. 22.—The marital wrangle of Pierre Tartoue, French portrait painter, was today again brought before the public by the filing of a suit of annulment by Mrs. George Busch., She seeks to have her marriage to Busch, who was formerly Mrs. Tartoue's husband, declared illegal.

Tartoue, replying to the separation suit of his wife, who was Miss Claudia Windsor, alleged her previous marriage ties to Louis Roth and Busch had not been severed when he married her, in November, 1915. Mrs. Tartoue maintained both had been annulled.

The suit of Mrs. Busch contradicts the contentions of Mrs. Tartoue as Mrs. Busch asserts that after her marriage in Seattle on June 28, 1913, she discovered Busch had married Claudia Windsor in New Westminster, British Columbia, on June 26, 1912, and that this marriage "was and still is in full force and effect."

Busch is now said to be in Buenos Ayres.

MALDEN WOMAN HURT IN FALL FROM PIAZZA

Mrs. Mary E. O'Connor lost her balance while shaking a rug from the piazza of the second story of her home at No. 40 Wigglesworth street, Malden, and fell twenty feet to the ground, causing injuries to her back. An X-ray will be made at the Malden Hospital to determine the extent of her injuries.

MISSING GIRL RETURNS TO HER DEDHAM HOME

Failure to Obtain Job as Telephone Operator Caused Despondency, Note Reveals

Mystery surrounding the disappearance and subsequent finding of pretty Marie Gallagher, eighteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Agnes E. Gallagher, of No. 29 Sanderson avenue, Dedham, was cleared today, when Mrs. Gallagher revealed the contents of a note left by her daughter last night when she left home.

Miss Gallagher said in her note she had been rejected as an applicant for a telephone operator's position in Boston because she was nervous.

She said she did not want her friends to know that she had failed in her attempt, and that possibly she would be dead by the time her mother read the note, which was left on the bureau in her bed room.

Mrs. Gallagher frantically telephoned the police to search for her daughter, and the alarm was sent to all surrounding communities. The mother telephoned to her sister, Mrs. John McGarry of Nathan street, Norwood, and with her husband Mrs. McGarry came to Dedham.

While they were in Dedham, the girl had come to their home, and returning home early this morning they found Marie sitting on the door step. She has since returned to her mother.

NURSE'S STORY MAY HELP ARBUCKLE

Declares She Attended Virginia Rappe in Chicago Eleven Years Ago

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Sensational information bearing on the early life of Virginia Rappe, beautiful movie actress, who died following a party staged by Roscoe C. "Fatty" Arbuckle, has been made in a deposition by Miss Virginia Warren, Chicago nurse, it was revealed today.

Miss Warren, now Mrs. Josephine Ross, made a deposition to counsel for Arbuckle which is to play an important part in his coming trial.

Miss Warren declared that she was a nurse in attendance upon Miss Rappe in 1908.

"I first saw Virginia Rappe in 1908," Miss Warren said. "I was called as a private nurse to attend her. She was in the apartment of Mrs. Josephine Fogarty.

"Miss Rappe was then only fourteen. She was in a delicate condition. She had been taken to Mrs. Fogarty's apartment by her grandmother.

She was also suffering at that time from a bad attack of intestinal trouble. On one occasion, she lay on her bed, she suddenly screamed, half rose and clutched at my waist. Her fingers tore into my skin and made deep scratches."

Miss Warren said Miss Rappe told her at that time that her illness made her violent at times.

HAS 14 DOGS, 6 CATS AND GOES TO COURT

"There's a difference between dogs that bark and dogs that are made to bark." With this statement, Miss Mary Kelly of Stoneham gave out her only hint of what her defence will be to the charge of maintaining a nuisance when she faces the Woburn Court next Thursday. Miss Kelly, who has fourteen dogs and six cats, faced Judge Johnson today and asked for a continuance. As the court granted her plea she confided to the bench her opinion of dogs. The court ventured the opinion that he did not care to hear about it until next Thursday.

GIRL NAMED FOR IDA LEWIS IS ILL

Newport, R. I., Oct. 22.—Ida Lewis Jansen, eight years old, has been taken to the Newport Hospital with scarlet fever from the Lime Rock lighthouse in Newport harbor, over which her father, Captain Evard Jansen, is the keeper. The child is named after the late Ida Lewis, famed as the Grace Darling of America. Captain and Mrs. Jansen succeeded Ida Lewis as keepers of the light.

LONG IS DENIED TREMONT TRUST BOOKS

Commissioner Allen Says Tax Chief Cannot Make Examination

State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long was today denied permission by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen to examine the books of the closed Tremont Trust Company for the purpose of determining whether the bank had paid the proper amount of taxes.

Commissioner Allen stated he could not legally turn over the books to Long, and he said there was no provision in the statutes to enable the tax commissioner to open a tax question with a trust company after the tax had been paid.

The law provides for a fine of from $500 to $5,000 for filing false returns.

Commissioner Long said he was prompted to ask for the books to check up tax returns made by the bank. Bank Commissioner Allen reported that on April 30, 1921, deposits of the Tremont Trust amounted to $7,164,836.

Long said the report of the bank as of October 20, 1920, showed deposits of $2,345,659 subject to the tax of one-half of 1 per cent.

On October 20, 1925, the bank reported deposits of $4,202,455 subject to taxation, and, in spite of the run on the bank in the Fall of 1920, the increase reported by the bank commissioner showed a large increase.

PATROLMAN IS BEATEN BY GANGSTERS

Patrolman McCarthy's Skull Fractured by Six Youths in Mattapan Fray

Patrolman William T. McCarthy, attached to the Mattapan station, sustained a fractured skull and severe internal injuries in a desperate fight with a gang of six men whom he found attempting to break into a store on Torrey street, near Chapman, Dorchester, early today.

He was rushed to the City Hospital in a passing automobile after his assailants had fled. There it is said that he is resting as comfortably as could be expected and that he probably would recover.

Two Roxbury youths are being held in connection with the attack.

McCarthy was on Torrey street when he saw the men standing near an automobile, the engine of which was running.

As he drew nearer he saw that two of the men were attempting to force an entrance into a small grocery and delicatessen store nearby.

Drawing his revolver, the officer commanded the men to throw up their hands and surrender. They obeyed without protest, according to one of the versions of the story told the police.

On the way to the patrol box, however, one of them turned on the officer without warning and struck him over the head with a half of brick, carried in a sack.

The blow knocked McCarthy into the gutter, fracturing his skull. As he lay there only partially conscious the gang jumped on him, the men stamping his form and kicking him in the face and stomach.

They then fled in the waiting car and McCarthy lay unconscious until a passing autoist spied him and carried him to the hospital.

Sergeant Williams of the Mattapan station went to the bedside of the injured officer and obtained a description of the members of the gang.

Immediately a city-wide search for McCarthy's assailants started and upon information they received the police made a special careful hunt in the vicinity of Magazine street, Roxbury, and there arrested four men, who were taken to police headquarters for investigation.

As a result of this two were released. The others gave their names as Edward Connelly, Norfolk avenue, Roxbury, and Charles Hurlbert, who claims to live at Dudley street, Roxbury.

Both were to be arraigned in Dorchester Court, charged with assault and battery upon the officer.

EVERETT CAPTAIN'S SHIP LONG OVERDUE

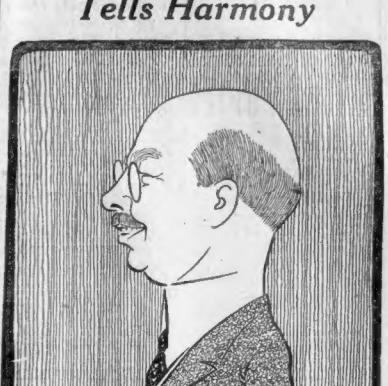
'It's a Republican Year; Watch Me,' Baxter Tells Harmony



CHARLES S. BAXTER

Artist Finds Candidate Is Bald, a Bachelor, and Fond of the Great Out-Doors.

By HENRY HARMONY

One point of difference marks Charles S. Baxter from all the other contestants in the mayoralty race.

He is bald—very, very bald. As bald as the proverbial billiard ball.

But that baldness does not indicate decrepitude. Indeed, his vigor and "pep" surprised me greatly for I had been led to believe that I should find up him a sick man. If he's sick then I'm a cripple. He is a bachelor.

It is the Republican candidate which probably explains why it is that like all the other candidates he is perfectly sure of success at the polls.

"Win!" he exclaimed, when I asked him what he felt about his chances. "Of course I am going to win. It's a Republican year. Watch me."

"And, besides," he went on, "I am the sort of mayor Boston wants and needs."

MERELY SELF-CONFIDENT.

Conceited? Not a bit of it, merely the self-confidence and self-assuredness that all the others have and that a man must have before launching himself into the swirling waters of politics, to sink or swim.

And then he told me something that really warmed my heart to him. He loves Lake Winnipesaukee, up in New Hampshire. Any man who does that is worth a vote. I wished that I had the privilege of my vote to Murphy, Pelletier and Curley before meeting Baxter, however, that may be changed.

Also Baxter is fond of out-of-doors. Fishing is a hobby of his, and he knows all there is to know of trolling rods and reels and the like.

Hunting or shooting is another of his pastimes. But that plays second fiddle to photography.

"I do my own printing and enlarging," he explained, "and it dots on it. Also," he went on, with a twinkle of his merry blue eyes, "as a perfectly good bachelor I enjoy taking in a musical comedy once in a while or a Winter show, though I admit I prefer something more substantial as a rule."

HE'S A GLOBE TROTTER.

Baxter is a widely traveled man. He has crossed the Atlantic many times, visiting France, England, Switzerland, Italy, Germany and Egypt.

During the World War he was chairman of the commission sent over to France from this State to establish a bureau of information and to care for the interests of the Massachusetts soldiers and sailors overseas.

He was in Paris when "Big Bertha" began pounding shells into Paris from a distance of seventy miles, and he tells with a grin of recollection how swiftly he managed to get into a bomb-proof cellar.

When he is not running for Mayor or attending to some other public duty Baxter is a busy lawyer, but he does not talk shop.

Instead he prefers to chat about the late President Roosevelt. He was a personal friend of the Sagamore Hill and he loves him to have been one of the three greatest Americans.

KEEPS HIS BOOKS THOUGH HE SUES HER FOR DIVORCE

Crawfords of Newton Stay Together in Business, But Live Apart

Although his wife still acts as his bookkeeper and they converse daily "in a business way," Fred L. Crawford, Newton garage proprietor and undertaker, has brought suit against her for divorce.

He charges cruel and abusive treatment, consisting, in the main, of an alleged lack of wifely sympathy.

The Crawfords are well known in Newton. Mrs. Estelle M. Crawford, the wife, is a leader in Eastern Star circles, and her husband in business.

They have been living apart for some time. He is at the Vernon Court Hotel, Newton. He directs his business interests from there.

She is at the home they formerly occupied together on Elmwood street, Newton, next to the garage, and reports daily for duty in her husband's place of business.

"I am looking for a divorce because I have no home life," said Crawford, explaining his action.

"I have had no comforting wife to go home to at night, nothing but constant nagging when I did go home. Life is no short, what's the use of standing it? I and my son Donald (By a former marriage) need a home."

This plea was ridiculed by Mrs. Crawford. She would not admit she knew a divorce suit had been filed against her, but when informed of what her husband had said she replied: "The charge is absurd."

She intimated she might have more to say later about her husband's career as a married man and would be able to prove she had led a blameless life.

Both Crawford and his wife have been previously married and divorced, the wife on two occasions.

Office employes have grown used to the unusual spectacle of the estranged wife officiating as bookkeeper in her husband's office and taking orders from him "in a business way" while living apart from him.

Frederick L. Crawford and his first wife, Maud C. Crawford, came into prominence in 1914, when he brought suit against Edward W. M. Moore of Allston for $10,000 for alleged alienation of her affections. Moore was engaged in the automobile repair business in Boston.

The alienation action lingered on the books of the Middlesex Superior Court until October 2, 1916, when it was dismissed by court order, under Rule 82, because no action had been taken on it in three years.

Following the divorce of Maud and Frederick Crawford, she was understood to have married Moore.

TUFTS TO FACE DISBARMENT TRIAL SOON

Indications Follow Another Meeting of Middlesex Bar Grievance Committee

Disbarment proceedings against Nathan A. Tufts, recently removed district attorney of the Northern District, will be started shortly, according to indications following another meeting of the grievance committee of the Middlesex County Bar Association.

After this meeting, at which Attorney-General J. Weston Allen was the only witness, Gilbert A. A. Pevey, chairman of the committee, stated that their report would be ready for the meeting of the council of the association, which is expected to take place a week from today.

Chairman Pevey also pointed out a significant clause in the constitution of the association, providing that disbarment proceedings can be instituted for "deceit, malpractice or other gross misconduct."

In as much as the Supreme Court, in its findings, declared Tufts to be guilty of conspiracy, it is self-evident that the association can take no other action than to recommend disbarment.

According to Chairman Pevey the grievance committee will hold another conference Monday at 8 p. m., but he stated that as far as he knew no other witnesses will be called. Tufts, who appeared before the committee Wednesday, and Attorney-General Allen have been the only two witnesses heard.

B. U. STUDENTS PLAN A DARKTOWN CARNIVAL

A Darktown Carnival is to be given by the Dramatic Club of the Boston University College of Secretarial Sciences. Miss Louise Newcomb of Manchester, N. H., is on the committee in charge.

The rest of the committee is as follows: Eleanor Bennett of West Somerville, Marjorie Graves of West Acton, Mildred Coleman of Medford of Newton Centre, Ruth Ridyard of Worcester, Carol Pierce of Ayer, Katherine Sumner of Exeter, N. H., and Helen Clark of Jamaica Plain.

The date for the performance has not been definitely settled upon.

ACCUSED OF DEFYING OFFICER, DENIES GUILT

Louis N. Izenerg of Wenonah street, Roxbury, who is alleged to have attempted to hold three officers at bay, today pleaded not guilty in the Roxbury Court to charges of resisting an officer and keeping and exposing liquor for sale. The case was continued to October 28. Izenerg, according to the police, resisted the attempt of Sergeant Harry N. Dickenson of the Dudley street station and two officers to investigate his apartments. The officers say they found a 15-gallon still in operation, twenty gallons of liquor and 400 gallons of mash on the premises.

WIVES CAN HUNT HUSBANDS IN RIVALS' FLATS

New York Judge Condones Raid and Exonerates Woman's Lawyer

New York, Oct. 22.—When a wife has cause to think her husband is in the act of wrong doing she has a perfect right to enter, in the day or night, an apartment where she has reason to believe she may find him.

This was the ruling by Magistrate Renaud in Washington Heights Court in dismissing a disorderly conduct complaint against Theodore B. Hoy, an attorney for Mrs. Arthur Gale Johnson.

Hoy accompanied Mrs. Johnson in a raid at No. 41 Bennett avenue, in which it is alleged they found her millionaire husband with Miss Alberta Broome and her mother, Mrs. Sarah Broome.

The evidence they found will be used in Mrs. Johnson's suit for divorce.

WINTHROP MEN HURT IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Harold J. Devereaux of No. 205 Lincoln street and Howard J. Keneally of No. 30 Bellevue street, both of Winthrop, were injured when a truck in which they were riding collided with a runabout operated by George C. Rowe of No. 46 Madison avenue, Winthrop, at the corner of Buchanan and Kinthrop streets. The former sustained a broken collar bone and the latter injuries to his chest and back. Both machines were damaged.

Marriage Makes Iowa Resident His Own Father-in-Law

By Universal Service.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Oct. 22.—Marriage has made George E. Bider, forty-four years old, his own father-in-law; the grandfather of six of his own children and step-father of his former wife.

He married his mother-in-law, Mrs. Julia Davis, forty-eight years old. He was divorced a few weeks ago from Mrs. Eva Bider, daughter of his new wife and mother of the six little Biders.

SCHOOL PUPILS FLEE FROM RUNAWAY

Several hundred school children and other pedestrians in Union square, Somerville, were forced to flee to safety when a horse attached to a wagon owned by William F. Carey of No. 32 Bow street, Somerville, became unmanageable and dashed up Somerville avenue and through the square.

Carey, who is in the market trucking business and was driving the horse, jumped from the wagon when the animal started kicking.

He brought the horse to a stop after the wagon had swung around a telegraph pole on Somerville avenue and went up on the sidewalk in front of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

The automobile of Dr. A. F. Bianchi was damaged by the wagon.

PETERS NAMES COMMITTEE TO GREET FOCH

Dr. Morton Prince Is Appointed Chairman of Body Which Will Arrange Program

In response to the invitation of Major James T. Dana, State commander of the American Legion, Mayor Peters has appointed the following committee to co-operate with the Legion in the reception to Marshal Foch of France when he visits Boston on November 14:

Mayor Andrew J. Peters, honorary chairman; Dr. Morton Prince, chairman; Captain David J. Brickley, member of City Council; Vincent Brogna, George R. Canty, secretary to the Mayor; Judge Abraham K. Cohen, Charles A. Coolidge, member of Board of Park Commissioners; Henry V. Cunningham, Dr. John J. Dewire, Cary Dreyfus, J. C. Joseph Flamand, French Consul; Allan Forbes, Louis E. Kirstein, Everett Morss, president Boston Chamber of Commerce; William S. O'Connor, Central Labor Union; E. V. B. Parke, City Collector; C. F. Weed, Alexander Whiteside.

TAUNTON MILL HELP GET 7½ P. C, PAY CUT

Taunton, Oct. 22.—A wage reduction of 7½ per cent., affecting 200 employes, is announced by the Taunton River Mills, a silk textile company. The cut was made in order that all the men might be kept at work, according to the superintendent.

HAYNES SCORES 'UNHOLY RUM ALLIANCE'

Attacks Men of High Position Who League With Bootleggers; Denounces Courts

By Universal Service.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The "unholy alliance" between men of high position and powerful liquor rings was denounced by Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes in an address here.

"There appears to be an unholy alliance between this apparently respectable class," Commissioner Haynes asserted, "and the most vicious and criminal class. This combination is a most formidable one.," He continued:

"It employs the best brains purchasable and uses every method workable in attempting to bribe or intimidate men charged with enforcement of the law.

"It resorts to every kind of political intrigue on social approach to break down the morale and stamina of the men whose sworn duty it is to make the law effective."

Declaring that "this profiteering criminality called bootlegging is a national menace," Commissioner Haynes pilloried Federal judges" who use their high position to express disdain of the Volstead Act."

It is time the judges took the 18th amendment more seriously, he asserted.

Initials Found on Egg Laid by a Connecticut Pullet

Putnam, Ct., Oct. 22.—Fred Wells of Park street has a large flock of choice Rhode Island reds of which he is very proud. In gathering the eggs last week he discovered that one of his pullets had laid an egg with initials on it. The letters S. Y. D. were very distinct on the shell. Perhaps the Y. D. stands for the Yankee Division.

400 WILL GO TO CONVENTION OF LEGION

New England Party to Leave on October 28 for Kansas City Meeting

By C. D. POWER.

The big New England party to the third national convention of the American Legion, and the first national convention of the Women's Auxiliary of the Legion, which will be held in Kansas City, Mo., will leave Boston, Worcester and Springfield, Friday October 28.

Indications are that there will be about 400 in the party, including delegates and alternates from most of the posts in the Yankee section of Connecticut. The national convention will be held on October 31 and November 1 and 2. The convention of the workers and sixers will be held on November 1 and 2.

The party will go by way of Montreal. A smaller party will not start until the following day and will take the more direct route by way of Chicago. A larger party of friends than usual will accompany the post delegations of the Legion.

State Commander James T. Duane and members of his office staff will escort Mrs. Bessie P. Edwards, wife of General Clarence R. Edwards, and other prominent members of the auxiliary who will leave Boston October 27 to arrange for the reception of the New England party.

TO ENTERTAIN YANKEES.

The Yankee Division Club of Kansas City is planning big things for the entertainment of the "boys from home." Chester W. Parker, a former Bostonian, is the president of the club and adjutant of Post No. 3 of Kansas City. The YD Club has established an information bureau for the benefit of New England delegation in the Union station, will provide automobiles to convey Yanks to their billets and will establish headquarters at No. 1213 Baltimore avenue, where the buddies of the old 26th may get together and tell all over and over again their war time experiences.

Daily automobile tours are being planned for the Yankee Division boys and serious consideration is being given to the holding of a banquet. The New Englanders are in favor of it if the program can be arranged so that they may leave on schedule time.

The following delegates and alternates will go to the Legion convention from Massachusetts:

Department Commander James T. Duane, Department Adjutant Leo A. Spillane, Department Commander-elect Charles H. Cole, Past Department Commanders John F. J. Herbert of Worcester and Edward L. Logan, Archibald H. Matthews of Springfield, Alexander G. Strong of Dedham, John H. Sherburne of Brookline, Arthur B. Stiles of Mansfield, Rev. W. O. Nusum of Cambridge, Stephen O. Brackett of Marblehead.

Dancing and Gaiety at Boston Restaurants

SUE BRINKLEY AT WINTER GARDEN

Sweet Singer to Be Hostess Throughout Winter at the Westminster

Susanne Brinkley, sweet singer and clever entertainer, will be the hostess at the Westminster Winter Garden during the coming season. Miss Brinkley has received many offers to tour in musical comedy, and even light opera, but she prefers to remain in Boston and at the Westminster.

Her singing, and that of several other entertainers, combined with the exceptional dance music supplied by Hector's Westminster orchestra, make the Winter Garden an extremely popular resort during the dinner and supper periods of the day.

Dancing at the Winter Garden is enjoyed in comfort, with no crowding, to perfect harmony and time tempo.

Combined with the unexampled cuisine of the restaurant and the general air of bonhomie and good humor which prevails, the Winter Garden offers many attractions to the solitary diner or the party in search of diversion. Emile Coulos, proprietor of the Winter Garden, loves nothing better than to find a real gastronomic gourmand, for whom he will have dishes prepared which cannot be surpassed in Paris.

BERESNACK ACQUITTED BY FEDERAL COURT

Through an error the Boston American yesterday printed a statement that Samuel M. Beresnack, former prohibition enforcement agent, who was accused last April of having accepted bribes in connection with his work, had been found guilty of the charge.

This is incorrect, Beresnack was cleared of the accusation and discharged on April 8 last, after trial in the Federal Court.

His was the first of three such cases in which Federal enforcement officers were accused of soliciting and accepting bribes. The other two, Daniel J. Ryan of New Jersey and John B. O'Dea of Lowell, also were cleared of guilt by the juries which listened to the evidence in their cases.

TUFTS TEACHERS SEE DEDICATION OF GATE

The Fall meeting of the Tufts Teachers' Association, composed of graduates of Tufts College who are engaged in teaching, opened today as several hundred delegates gathered on the college campus to attend dedicatory ceremonies in connection with the opening of a memorial gate to the late Harold Anthony Gager. It was designed by Professor E. H. Wright of the Tufts Engineering School.

"ALL FOOLS AT TIMES," STATES DR. MORISON

"We are all of us fools at times—nations as well as individuals—but the only possible thing is for each of us to endure the other's madness." This was the statement of Dr. J. L. Morison, professor of colonial history in Queens University at Kingston, Ont., speaking before 150 members of the Yale Club of Boston at a dinner at the Boston Art Club.

W. G. O'HARE TO RUN FOR SCHOOL COMMITTEE

William G. O'Hare of No. 59 Monument avenue, Charlestown, today announced that he would be a candidate for election to the Boston School Committee next December. In announcing his candidacy, O'Hare stressed his nine years' varied experience as instructor and submaster in Boston schools as one of his qualifications for committeeman.

WOMAN'S AUTO KILLS MAN IN SOMERVILLE

Basilio Besa of No. 33 School street, Somerville, was struck and almost instantly killed on Highland avenue, Somerville, by an auto operated by Mrs. Allyne S. Conant of Summer street, Somerville. He died at the Somerville Hospital from a fractured skull and internal injuries. He was running on Highland avenue to board a one-man Boston-bound car when the machine hit him.

FIVE MENTIONED FOR CHELSEA MAYORALTY

Announcement that Mayor Melvin B Breath of Chelsea that he would not be a candidate for a third term started politicians talking about possible successors. Five men prominently mentioned for the office are: Solicitor Louis R. Kiernan, former Mayor James H. Malone, George F. Anderson, Lawrence F. Quigley and Maurice Caro.

ITALIAN SUITE IS PROVIDED AT LENOX

L. C. Prior, mine host of the Brunswick and Lenox, is never content with things as they are, but is continually introducing novel features in both his hotels.

It is only a few weeks since the popular Egyptian room was turned into another sort of Egyptian room at a cost of many thousands of dollars, and now Italy has been pronounced charming by the throngs who love to dance to the alluring music of Reisman's Orchestra.

Just at present he is transforming one of the suites at the Hotel Lenox into an Italian apartment, furnishing it with Italian art treasures, and intending to offer it to the various Italian celebrities who come to Boston from time to time. Incidentally it is the same suite which Caruso used to occupy when he came to Boston.

ACTRESS GIVES BANQUET AT DREYFUS

Popular Restaurant Proving Mecca for Those Who Enjoy Good Food

In inaugurating the professional banquet season, Miss Patricola, one of the headliners of B. F. Keith's Theatre, this week, was hostess to a gathering of Keith's artists at a birthday party at the Restaurant Dreyfus.

The Dreyfus chef, Marius Decanus, baked a huge birthday cake especially in her honor, and expanded much energy on the table decorations. Included were flowers and favors in Miss Patricola's favorite color—pink.

Among the guests were Frances Pritchard, Cambridge girl, who has achieved success in musical comedy and vaudeville; the Four Morons, Cressy and Dane, Ernest Hall, Billy Dale, and other well-known vaudevillians.

Miss Patricola was presented by her fellow artists with a beautiful handbag and a large bouquet of flowers.

Already at this popular restaurant reservations are being made for the holidays.

COPLEY SQUARE HOTEL

The popularity of the dancing rooms at the Copley Square Hotel is increasing daily. The combination of good food and good music, refined surroundings and competent service brings the occasional visitor to become a regular patron. The afternoon theatre suppers are a feature of this restaurant.

Remember the good old days before canned foods and indigestion—
When "three-decker" cream pies were made from real cream
Just fairly oozing out between the layers—
When real butter and real eggs and real milk were used sort of carelessly in the baking and cooking—
When every wife did her own baking, was proud of it, and tried to outdo her neighbor?
Here is our Famous French Restaurant that still adheres to old fashioned policies and old fashioned methods. And when real art is used in the selection of ingredients, the mixing and the cooking, the expense is moderate. Here, a good meal awaits you, at old time prices.

CHURCHES UNITE IN MOVE TO AID JOBLESS

Services, Mass Meeting and Forums to Advance Ideals November 13-14

The following letter, reprinted in part, signed by heads of the three great religious bodies of Greater Boston—Catholic, Protestant and Jewish—describes how these bodies will cooperate in the two-day conference on unemployment, November 13 and 14:

Editor, Boston American:

Important elements in Greater Boston representing industrial management; wage earners, organized and unorganized; and the public have arranged for a two-day conference on unemployment; industrial relations and economic democracy. With this conference the three great religious communions, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, are co-operating each in its own way.

PLAN CHURCH SERVICES.

November 13 and 14 have been set aside for a series of church services, forums, and mass meetings at which industrial ideal, the Golden Rule in industry, and economic democracy, will be discussed, preached and made subjects of addresses.

Prominent clergymen, well-known industrial leaders and specialists in the field of labor, both local and from other parts of the country, will fill the pulpits of Greater Boston to deliver messages on some phases of the general theme.

WANT MESSAGE SPREAD.

We urge hearty co-operation through news and editorial columns as a means of advertising our city and our people in a way which will reflect credit upon Boston and thereby send a message throughout the country to bear fruit and to inspire other communities with a similar spirit of idealism.

Trusting that you will think favorably of this request, we remain,

Yours very truly,
(Signed)

Mayor and Selectmen to Be Interviewed

Appointment of a sub-committee headed by Charles E. Davenport, a Boston attorney, with offices at No. 53 State street, to consult with the mayors of cities and selectmen of towns, formed the chief business of yesterday's meeting of the executive committee of the State Committee to Promote Work, recently appointed by Governor Cox. Benjamin F. Felt was named to take charge of publicity for the committee.

SHOE TRADE WARNED TO TAKE SMALL PROFITS

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The retail shoedealer must get down to a realization that good shoes will sell for $6 or $7 or lose out, Harry I. Thayer warned the trade in an address to the National Convention of Tanners here.

"Surplus stocks have been well liquidated," he said, "and this has reflected favorably on the raw material marketing, resulting in a better price for hides now than several months ago. But manufacturers for some years to come must calculate on a smaller margin of profits."

Fresh From Paris

Paris, France.

DATING from the openings, all the dark clouds of Paris have developed silver linings! And so a black crepe satin dinner-gown provides itself with silver and sapphire shoulder straps and a blue and silver brocaded girdle. The tissue of the frock drapes to a point over one hip, from where a wide pointed panel falls to the ground, thus achieving the smart irregular hemline. The straight-across corsage line is also very much of the mode.

STRIPES of Byzantine red velvet and stripes of silver lace go the length of making an entire dinner gown from "bateau" neckline to square panel-train. Armholes from shoulder to waistline introduce wide Chinese sleeves that are slit to the elbow at one side and fall panel-like to half the length of the skirt. Above the elbow the sleeves are gathered in at each side of the waistline, which is indicated by a narrow silk piping where the horizontal stripes of the bodice meet those that flow perpendicularly to make the skirt.

LAMONT FAILS IN EFFORT TO AID MEXICO

Unable to Conclude Negotiations on Refunding of Republic's Debt

By Associated Press.

Mexico City, Oct. 22.—Negotiations looking to refunding Mexico's foreign debt and re-establishment of the nation's credit, which have been carried on between Thomas W. Lamont and Adolfo de la Huerta, Secretary of the Treasury, for two weeks, have apparently failed of practical result.

Lamont is returning to New York. He left no representatives here.

It was learned by the Associated Press that his report would be made to a group of American and European bankers about October 29.

President Obregon declined to comment on Lamont's departure, saying that all statements would be made by Secretary de la Huerta. The Secretary issued the following statement:

"Mr. Lamont, with his detailed comments and friendly conversations with different officials of the Mexican government, has been able to inform himself regarding the Mexican economic situation and the facilities of the Mexican government for fulfilling its financial obligations.

"With this data, it is hoped he will be able to exchange opinions with the parties he represents, and there will be formed a general plan which will be proposed to the Mexican government, and within which its financial activity can be developed in future.

"Several differences of viewpoint held by both parties prior to the conference have disappeared through the clearing up of some doubtful points. The minister of finance believes that the future development will be carried out by the bankers' committee, and the Mexican government will count on his co-operation for the final settlement of its financial questions abroad."

TOBACCO FIRM WINS IN TRADE MARK FIGHT

In an opinion just handed down in the Patent Office, P. Lorillard Company has been held entitled to use the trade mark "Beech-Nut" for tobacco products, including cigarettes.

The case arose from an application filed by the Beech-Nut Packing Company in the Summer of 1919 for the registration of this trade mark for cigarettes.

The Packing Company based its application upon the use it and its predecessors had heretofore made of the trade mark for many years, beginning about 1891, for meats, and gradually extended until it included groceries, candy and chewing gum.

The ground of the decision is that tobacco products are goods of entirely different descriptive qualities from groceries, meats, candy and chewing gum.

DR. MAGRATH TO EXAMINE BODY OF SEARLES

District Attorney Turns Over Autopsy on Methuen Recluse to Medical Examiner

Lawrence, Oct. 22.—Mystery still surrounds the exhuming and autopsy ordered on the body of the late Edward F. Searles of Methuen, multimillionaire, regarding whose death hints of foul play were made. It was learned that the district attorney's office has turned entire charge of the autopsy over to Dr. George B. Magrath, medical examiner of Suffolk County.

It had been previously announced by District Attorney B. Howard Donnell of Essex County that Dr. George W. Dow, medical examiner of the Lawrence district, would perform the autopsy.

Why Dr. Dow left suddenly for New York, and whether or not it was in connection with the Searles case, could not be learned. Up to this week the Lawrence doctor understood that he was to perform the autopsy.

Dr. Magrath stated that he was merely acting in an advisory capacity in the matter, but refused to divulge the date of the arrival of the millionaire's body in Boston.

The strictest secrecy is being maintained in the matter, it is understood, at the request of the residents of Pine Lodge, the late residence of the millionaire.

District Attorney Donnell said that he could not afford to spend all his time on the Searles case and has appointed State Officer Richard P. Griffin as the county's representative on the case. All future details will be arranged by Officer Griffin, he said.

The district attorney said he knew nothing as to when the autopsy will take place and will not be present personally. He said he believed it would be over by next Monday.

"I will not know of it until a few hours before it takes place," he said "Perhaps I will not know until it is over."

All Bates College Men Offer to Aid Roads

By Associated Press.

Lewiston, Me., Oct. 22.—President Clifton D. Gray of Bates College has tendered President Morris McDonald of the Maine Central the services of the entire student body in the event of a strike. President Gray's action was announced today and was cheered by the students.

President Gray's telegram said:

"Bates College offers its entire man power to assist in meeting the emergency. Bates men are not technically trained, but they are ready to serve in any capacity when humanity calls."

JEWELERS ENJOINED BY SUPREME COURT

The Massachusetts Supreme Court has entered a decree enjoining Wilson Bros. Co., an old established retail jewelry concern of No. 16 Court street, Boston, from using the name "Kum-a-Part" in connection with the selling of cuff buttons not manufactured by The Bae & Wilde Co. of Attleboro. It appears that complaints have been received by The Bae & Wilde Co. from consumers who went to the Wilson Bros' Co. establishment in an effort to purchase "Kum-a-Part" Buttons. In one case the substitution was discovered by the consumer being dissatisfied with the buttons he purchased, for the reason that one of them broke within a short time after purchase and on returning them to the "Kum-a-Part" factory for repair, it was discovered that he had been sold an imitation.

ROXBURY GIRL IS AGAIN HOAX VICTIM

Latest Stunt of "Joker" Comes in Shape of Flowers for "Miss Green's Funeral"

That the woman who has been "tipping" Boston newspapers of developments in the hoax on Miss A. K. Green of No. 25 Perrin street, Roxbury, is the same woman who has been attempting to frighten the girl, or knows the person responsible, was the opinion expressed today by Miss Green.

The latest move of the practical joker was to send flowers to the home with the note, "For the funeral of Miss Anna K. Green."

Last Monday the woman warned Miss Green over the telephone that she was going to be shot to death. Last Friday five doctors came scurrying to the Green home to "save" Mrs. Dennis H. Green, the girl's mother, from "insanity."

They were all summoned by the mysterious woman. Mrs. Green is quite normal.

On Saturday two doctors called at the home and said they came to treat Mrs. Green, and word was received that a police ambulance had been called.

Miss Green said she did not know who the woman is who has been calling the Boston American and announcing the latest episodes in the hoax. The police have been unable to find the person, with the peculiar sense of humor, and a private detective is working on the case.

JUDGE CABOT TO SPEAK TO LEND-A-HAND CLUBS

Judge Frank P. Cabot of the Juvenile Court will be one of the speakers at the Autumn conference of Lend-A-Hand clubs today in the Universalist Church, Coolidge Corner. There will be a morning and afternoon session. The other speakers will be Mrs. Eleanor Roulson of the Boston Seaman's Aid Society and L. G. Ingraham of Sparta, Ga.

RAIDERS SWOOP DOWN AGAIN ON CLUB

69 Bottles of Liquor Seized by Sheriff in Portland Organization's Building

Portland, Me., Oct. 22.—The second raid on the Cumberland Club here, conducted by Sheriff King Graham after he had been informed that club members were boasting that his first descent on their headquarters had failed to wipe out their supply of liquor, netted sixty-nine bottles of high-proof whiskey, it was announced today.

Arthur E. Hughes, steward of the club, was again arrested on a charge of unlawful possession of alcoholic liquor. He was arraigned in court, today facing this charge and a similar one placed after the first raid last Thursday.

The second raid, which came during the middle of the afternoon, took club members and officials completely by surprise. The searching officers went through the building from top to bottom, opening the supplies in the club cafe, forcing open private lockers belonging to the club members, confiscating suit cases and bags said to be loaded with liquor.

A number of the city's most prominent business men are said to be involved in the seizures. One suit case containing eight quarts of whiskey bore the name of a well-known attorney, it is said, while another grip containing a similar quantity of whiskey and two quarts of gin is alleged to be the property of an equally prominent salt merchant.

Whether any action will be taken toward any of the individual club members is not known.

HILLEBRAND TALKS ABOUT COMEDIANS

Explains Why Most Tall Fun Makers Are "Dry" and Short Ones Unctous

Fred Hildebrand was talkin about comedians.

They tell me that Boston's first celebrity in musical comedy was a tall, lank and rather "dry" entertainer named Dan Daly. And the same people that told me about this asked me how it is that most tall comedians are of the "dry" order and most short ones are what they call unctuous. All I can say is that it must be constitutional.

I am sorry to say I never saw Dan Daly on the stage. My professional career goes back only fifteen years and in this comparatively short space of time I have studied comedians like Wolf Hopper, Bert Williams, Frank Tinney and Richard Carle. If you classify these stars as tall and short you will see there is considerable truth to what the Dan Daly people say.

Hopper was the first comedian to rank among my stage heroes and I'll never forget his dry cackle; and Hopper, by the way, is one of the few who comes near me in height. He is close to six feet two and I am six feet three. Dick Carle, another comedian of the dry order, was known far and wide as the Boston comedian when I was a kid in Pennsylvania. Probably that was because he wore glasses. Down where I lived we thought everyone in Boston wore spectacles and that every funny man in Boston was just like Carle.

Ethel Draws On and Off.

Ethel Barrymore off the stage as well as on is a big drawing card. Her professional matinee of "The Claw," arranged so that Ethel, who was run over by a taxicab in "Déclassée," could see Lionel, her brother, die by being hit with a brick in "The Claw," drew a larger audience than many of the regular performances, and brought in more money at the box office likewise. When Ethel sat herself down in an aisle seat in the orchestra the folks on the stage were temporarily as distant as a Harvard freshman game at Soldiers Field when the varsity is playing in the Stadium.

That's She Going to Do With It?

Margaret Anglin, who is playing at the Plymouth Theatre in her success, "The Woman of Bronze," has just come the proud possessor of the cast proscenium painting from old Daly's Theatre, New York city, and the medallions of Shakespeare and Moliere as well, which were inserted in the boxes.

The object of the painting, which represents a Roman festival given in celebration of an imperial victory a second century after Christ, is particularly appropriate at this time that the representation of the devastation of war on one side balanced by symbols of joy and peace on the other, is reminiscent of our battlefields in France with their dark horror and desolation.

Holding the centre of the big canvas is a Roman marionette show with the women populace as an audience in the foreground. To the extreme left is a pageant of drama with Homer and his lyre as the outstanding figure. Another pageant of nature with Dante's figure (copied from Cliote's Dante) holds the left centre of the picture, while in the background the stairs of the Legion of Honor are ornamented with gaudy, picturesque symbols adorn up conspicuously. At the extreme right Virgil is lectured and right centre Diogenes with his lantern appears in the dusty garb of the Stoic philosophers.

War Is Hell.

Five Tell, probably the only lady who ever participated in a naval battle, at least since they fought in steel with bullets instead of wooden ships, as it is like that.

I am frightened to death during a battle scene in "In the Night Watch" when I am supposed to be locked in a stateroom down below in the ship which is torpedoed. The scene is tremendous out front you can imagine what it must be back stage where they make it. I am locked in my room all right, because I fly to my ceiling room and close the door tight as soon as the battle commences. But I don't come out until they call me. Then I stand in the wings with my ears covered. All I do in that scene is get carried up on the deck of the sinking ship, but I'll tell you war is terrible."

A Lieutenant of Industry

Arthur Linden, who plays Cornelius Vanderbilt in "Little Old New York," is figured to some extent in the Horn program of big business, according to Mr. J. F. Sullivan, who utes pieces for the paper which appears annually that "Little Old New York" is a good show and can be seen at the Tremont.

It's an odd coincidence, says Mr. Sullivan, that Linden should be playing the founder of modern railroad dancing when before he donned the skin he was some mumpkins in the broad business himself.

Previous to going on the stage Mr. Linden was secretary to J. J. Hill, late president of the Great Northern, and at one time held the same position with A. B. Stickney, president of the Great Western. The association of Mr. Linden with these captains of industry made possible a thorough knowledge of the inside workings of this interesting business. It should have made Mr. Linden at least a lieutenant of industry. Do you suppose he went on the stage as a result of a bet. Mr. Sullivan neglects to inform us further.

Things Are Dull in London.

Alma Tresayne, a young English woman with the Madge Kennedy company at the Shubert Theatre, is making her first trip to the United States. There is a part in "Cornered" that requires a maid who speaks the French language correctly and fluently and Miss Tremayne is that maid. She came from London last Fall, so for reason, as she expresses it, was I came out because things were frightfully dull in London, don't you know."

"For that matter," spoke John McGee, casting director for Henry W. Savage, "things are frightfully dull over." But Miss Tremayne has youth, a trim figure, Cheeple ability and linguistic accomplishments, and she was engaged for the part of Leonitine, and rightly she chatters in Latin with Miss Kennedy, her mistress in the play.

BOSWORTH IN VIVID FILM DRAMA

Hobart Bosworth, the screen's foremost exponent of virile out-of-door roles, supported by an all-star cast in a vivid drama of Alaska, the rush days and modern business, "Blind Hearts," is announced at Gordon's Scollay Sq. Olympia as the feature beginning Monday.

Real Modern Pirates.

Captain Kidd in his palmiest day was a piker compared with the girl of Broadway today. At least that seems to be the impression of the lay public which reads of the gold-diggers, et al., who have devoted themselves to thinking up more ways of grafting than are known to the politicians.

The Broadway Pirates are Twentieth Century Pirates and as such they are described in a picturesque and funny interlude that will be offered in Shubert Vaudeville at the Majestic Theatre this coming week, as one of the scenes of Jimmy Hussey and the Century Revue. This number was one of the best, in the opinion of the New York critics of "The Mimic World of '21" at the Promenade Theatre on the Century Roof. The vaudeville act is a condensation of the big show, snapped up to vaudeville requirements.

Pretty girls and yet more pretty girls who make up part of the cast of this big vaudeville production take part in the Broadway Pirates number and very plainly show just how the real Broadway pirates work. The real Broadway pirates, not the girls of the Century Revue (for the management gives assurance that they are quite respectable school teachers and only learned the tricks during rehearsals) have been known to separate money from a banker without paying interest—and that's the height of financial accomplishment in the days.

McISAAC says that

ETHEL BARRYMORE enters the last fortnight of her very successful engagement of "Déclassée" at the Hollis Monday night. Crowded houses have been the rule.

MADGE KENNEDY, in "Cornered," enters upon her final week at the Shubert Theatre. This snappy little melodrama has given the winsome little star exceptional opportunities.

"ROSE GIRL," an elaborate musical comedy, in which Fred Hildebrand, the elongated comedian, has a field day. Tuneful and sweet. Wilbur.

MARGARET ANGLIN, in "The Woman of Bronze," moves on after another week at the Plymouth. Rarely has this fine actress been given such a chance to do emotional work.

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK," the quaint and simple comedy of a century ago in New York city, with its strongly flavored Irish atmosphere, has caught on at the Tremont.

ZIEGFELD'S FOLLIES enter upon another week of capacity business at the Colonial.

"IN THE NIGHT WATCH," the big spectacular melodrama at the Boston Opera House, with Robert Warwick and Olive Tell, begins its last week.

THE BIG FILMS

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS," in which Douglas Fairbanks is having the time of his life, has but two weeks more to remain at the Selwyn Theatre.

"WAY DOWN EAST," at the Globe, continues to demonstrate its pulling power.

"OVER THE HILL," at the Tremont Temple, still draws heavily upon lovers of sentiment and poetry.

"TWO LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE"

The next attraction at the Colonial Theatre will be A. L. Erlanger's musical comedy production, "Two Little Girls in Blue," which comes for a short return engagement Monday, November 7. This attraction played a very brief engagement at the same theatre at the tag-end of last season, when it was put on the stage for the first time. The success it met with at that time was little short of a furore, being withdrawn in full flood of favor, but it had been previously intended for a New York Summer run.

FRANKLIN PARK THEATRE

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Franklin Park Theatre, Louis A. Selznick will present his starring screen story, "Handcuffs and Kisses," featuring Elaine Hammerstein. It asks the pointed question, Do Reform Schools Reform? The big vaudeville entertainment will be headed by Patrick King and company and the added feature will be the three Roses.

TALMADGE IS OLD SOUTH STAR

Constance Talmadge, whimsical, tantalising and captivating as ever, is the star of "Woman's Place," the First National attraction which will commence an engagement at Gordon's Old South Theatre on Monday.

BOSTON ARENA

Four big events will feature Gala Dancing Week at the New Boston Arena next week. The most important event of the week is scheduled for Friday night when a popularity contest is held at which Miss Arena is chosen. This is the climax-ial event of the popularity contests and all girls who are in the sections al competition are eligible for this contest. The district contests have been held for Back Bay, Allston, Brighton, Newton, Waltham, South Boston, East Boston, Charlestown, Dorchester, Roxbury, Watertown and Cambridge.

This Greater Boston popularity contest is attracting great interest among the dancers. A mammoth Arena loving cup will be awarded the most popular girl chosen by a committee of judges.

Monday night competitions will be held in four special events, a novelty dance contest, for trot on a kitchen table, one step on a two-inch plank and waltz up and down stairs of four flights.

A balloon race and an Arena aerial ballet will be the main features of the program for dancing Tuesday night at the Arena. Carnival night will be observed Wednesday night at which there will be 1000 funmakers. Regular dancing will be the order on Saturday night.

GAYETY THEATRE

Joe Hurtig, whose name as a producer of the best burlesque is recognized wherever burlesque is known, will be represented at the Gayety Theatre all this week by "The Greenwich Village Revelers," a production well known by name to Bostonians but which has not been seen in this city. Reports from New York caused Boston to wait with eagerness for this new masterpiece of burlesque.

Novelty characterises "The Greenwich Village Revelers" in every department, from the book to the scenic and costume investiture. The book was written by Sam Morris, whose name is a guarantee of merit. The show, which is in ten scenes, is both topical and timely.

HUSSEY HEADLINER AT MAJESTIC

Century Revue and Famous Prize Fight Scene Among Other Features

The success of Shubert Vaudeville at the Majestic Theatre has become such an established fact that no mention of it is necessary beyond a forecast of the good things offered in the program for the coming week. Distinctly a notable feature will be Jimmy Hussey and the Century Revue direct from the beautiful promenade atop the Century Theatre, New York. It contains some of the principal scenes of "The Mimic World of 1921," including the prize fight scene that made even Jack Dempsey laugh at the opening performance. Jimmy Hussey, comedian extraordinary, is surrounded by a host of charming females, the prize crop of Broadway this season, a combination of brains, beauty and comedy.

Other features include: Jolly Johnny Jones & Co., known as the Tango Door Johnnie," one of the biggest novelties from the New York Hippodrome; the Ziegler Sisters in a scintillating revel of dance and syncopation, presenting a series of up-to-date dances in a handsome special setting, including a Jass waltz, a Scotch double, and eccentric waltz, and a Spanish number, with a male dancing partner and a violin soloist; Rath Brothers, America's athletes in "A study in Endurance;" Dave Vine and Luella Temple in "Making Nonsense An Art," a singing duologue, done in their own distinctive way; Joe Jackson, the dean of comedy trick cyclists, creator of the hobo cycle-characters; Burt Earle and His 8 Girls, in a mirthful musical garden party, a clever combination of Californians who play in grouges nine saxaphones, nine banjos and nine orchestral instruments.

The Drama League Loves Him.

According to the present viewpoint it is not because Porter Emerson Browne wrote "A Fool There Was," "A Girl of Today," "Rich Man, Poor Man" and "The Spendthrift" that it is important he was born in Maplewood, Mass., but that he finally did write "The Bad Man." While the first-named put money in his pockets and made him "a playwright" by their greater or lesser lives, it has been entirely for "The Bad Man" that dinner invitations from Drama Societies have flocked in to him.

There was an interim between the preparation for the first group and his "hit" of today, and during that time Mr. Browne lived amid much drama. His article on the sinking of the Lusitania brought him to Theodore Roosevelt's attention and from their meeting was formed "The Vigilantes," an association of leading writers most active before and during the first days of the Great War. In this group were Julian Street, Hermann Hagedorn, Charles Hanson Towne and Mr. Browne with others. Mr. Browne was also on the Mexican borderland after the Villa raid of 1916, and from his meetings with Francisco Villa has grown "The Bad Man," in which the central figure is Villa, even to the using of some of the speeches and sentiments from the mouth of the bandit.

Gallo Makes It Pay.

There is every indication that the San Carlo fortnight of opera will be successful financially. This is good for the company believed there was a big public for good opera in this city, and the chances for an organization like that operated by Fortune Gallo to come in here every year to remain for six weeks are excellent if he is careful to give high class performances.

Gallo has a remarkable little Italian. He has done what no living person has ever done before in this commonplace grand opera profitable. To make it profitable, he frequently has to make it bad. Some years ago Gallo played in Boston and the kind of opera he gave at that time wasn't anything to boast about. However, Gallo has grown ambitious. He engages great singers, and has used larger orchestras and choruses than he used to do. In New York, at the Manhattan Opera House, he has just completed a very creditable season. When you think of the prima donnas and compare them with what they get at the Metropolitan, you have to doff your chapeau to the little Napoleon of the opera world.

McMasters Is Shy.

Clyde McArdle, manager of the Somerville Players and James M. Doyle, stage director, at last succeeded in getting William H. McMasters, author of "The Undercurrent" into a corner and made him promise to read the final draft of rehearsal of his new play, that holds the boards the coming week.

"You are a lucky playwright I ever saw who didn't sit around at the rehearsals of a new play," said Doyle.

To which McMasters replied, "Doyle, what's the use of my butting in? If the manuscript doesn't tell the story then I could talk my head off and not say a thing."

"The manuscript is as clear as any I ever read," answered Doyle, "and your criticism upon the company is all very complimentary, but I'd like to have you show up at the final dress rehearsal just the same."

"All right," said the author, "but the only thing I'll do is thank the company for the way they are reading the lines."

Doyle threw up his hands.

EDITOR'S COMMENT—The shoves was submitted to McMasters himself. The only way you could keep him from attending all the rehearsals of his play would be to lock him up in a deserted cellar. And the only way you could keep him from talking about it would be to cut out his tongue.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS

The Somerville Players will present for the first time on any stage a new American play, written by a Boston author, William H. McMasters, called "The Undercurrent." The piece is presented in three acts with a psychological interlude between acts two and three. In the form in which it will be shown the coming week the author has followed suggestions made by the famous producer, John Golden. "The Undercurrent" contains many splendid roles suitably adapted to the individual personalities of the various members of the company. Miss Enid Markey, the popular leading lady, will have the most important part and it is safe to predict that Miss Markey will add another conquest to her long list of successes. Arthur Howard has been assigned to the leading male role.

BIG GAMBLER FINDS FILM JOB

Scott Turner Quits Life of Chance Because He Finds It Doesn't Pay

Scott Turner, known as the "Cheechee Kid," one of the biggest and best-known gamblers in the country, has quit gambling because he has learned that it doesn't pay. After forty years of active participation in the gambling profession, from New York to Alaska and all way points, he has come to the conclusion that if he had used the same amount of time and energy in running a peanut wagon, it would have been a better investment financially.

Mr. Turner has discovered another profession which he expects will prove to be as exciting and fascinating as gambling—the movies. While looking for some legitimate way to earn his living—he never saved a cent during his forty years of gambling—he answered an ad for extra to appear in a big gambling hall for the screen. The director of the picture declared him a perfect type for a gambler. Turner then told the director who he was and what part he had played in the gambling history of the mining camps and the big houses of chance in the large cities.

Mr. Turner recently assisted on the details of an Alaskan gambling house and also taught Pauline Frederick, the star, how to operate a roulette wheel and how to hold stacks of chips. Mr. Lloyd was so pleased with Turner's evident knowledge of gambling and crooks in general that he engaged him to play the role of a croon in "The Invisible Power," which comes to the Park Theatre next week.

PARK HEATRE

An unusual story of the underworld and the far-reaching fingers of the police detectives will be seen at the Park Theatre next week when "The Invisible Power" will be shown there for one week.

This story was written by Charles Kenyon, author of the famous American play, "Kindling." The romantic and virile looking Renee Peters and the beautiful Irene Rich play the leading parts.

"The Invisible Power" is not concerned with crooks in their crooked-ness, but with the attempts of some of them to reform and the difficulties that a past "record" places in their path. The sacrifices of the reformed thief's wife (Irene Rich), add poignant pathos to a splendidly acted and logical story.

A romantic love story with a decidedly new twist is that portrayed in "The Infamous Miss Revell," starring Alice Lake, which is the other feature.

The story deals with the adventures of Julien Revell, who becomes nurse to a wealthy old man and earns the bitter enmity of his heirs when she is left his fortune with the result that she becomes the victim of a strange vengeance. The supporting cast, are Culley Landis, Jackie Saunders, Lydia Knott, Herbert Standing and Alfred Hollingsworth. Arthur J. Zellner adapted it from the story of W. Carey Wonderly, R. H. Kleffel was the photographer and Joseph Calder art director.

WINTER GARDEN SHOW

The New York Winter Garden "Passing Show of 1922" in which Willie and Eugene Howard are starring, is the first of the Messrs. Shubert's productions of this type seen by the Shubert Theatre, Monday night, October 31. The new "Passing Show" is in two acts and twenty-six scenes that rival in splendor an oriental pageant. The supporting cast provided for this colossal revue comprises a very unusual collection of singers, dancers and comedians. Included among them are the teams of O'Hanlon and Zamboni, Meliette Sisters, Grace and Berkes, Schrode and Aronson, the remaining portion being May Roley, Emily Miles, Ina Hayward, Polly Haskell, Jessie May, Peggy Merrimount, Tiny Collins, the men being Will Philbrick, Cleveland Bronner, John Lambert, Frederick Voris, Jerome O'Hay, W. H. Pringle, Jack E. Rice, Anthony Jochim, Robert Gilbert, Victor Rosart, Jack Hall and Francis X. Mahoney and a bevy of Winter Garden girls and showgirl like goddesses.

"MARY ROSE"

The advent of Miss Ruth Chatterton at the Hollis Street Theatre Monday, November 7, will be the interesting news to local playgoers who revel in the works of Barrie. Since Maud Adams introduced and latest of Barrie's plays, "Mary Rose," the piece has still running in London and ran five months at the Empire Theatre, New York. Before contracting interested Miss Chatterton's run, Barring New York, "Mary Rose" has not been given in any of the eastern cities of the first class, as the company was sent to the Pacific Coast at the end of its New York engagement. Lovers of "The Little Minister," "Peter Pan," "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire" and "Dear Brutus" will find much to delight them in "Mary Rose." The engagement is for two weeks, with the usual matinees.

EMMY DESTINN

Expectation runs high of the return to Boston of Emmy Destinn. This favorite of concert and opera appearances in former seasons was confined, during the period of the war by the blockade of the contending armies, to her own country, Czechoslovakia. For a long time there was no news of her whereabouts, and doubt as her safety. After the declaration of the armistice, she immediately journeyed to London, Rome and Paris and favorite of the Covent Garden Opera season there, and last season returned to America, the country of her adoption, where in a number of cities the beauty of her voice was acclaimed as in its fullest and finest maturity.

WALDRON'S

James E. Cooper's widely known burlesque review, "Keep Smiling," presenting two of America's leading comedians, Bert Lahr and Harry Kay, will be the big attraction at Waldron's this week.

BEN TURPIN IN FILM AT ORPHEUM

Cross-Eyed Comedian in New Film Success Entitled "Love and Doughnuts"

Ben Turpin, the well-known screen comedian of cross-eyed fame, who recently attracted much attention in this city will be the headliner of an exceptionally attractive bill that will be offered for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. Turpin will appear in his latest comedy entitled "Love and Doughnuts."

"IL TROVATORE" AT ARLINGTON

Verdi's tuneful opera, "Il Trovatore," will be given by the Boston Society of Singers at the Arlington Theatre this week. Much of the interest of "Il Trovatore" centres around Azucena, the gypsy hag. Miss Emma Almeda and Miss Elva Boyden will alternate in this exacting role, and as they both have exceptionally beautiful contralto voices, their interpretation of the role is awaited with much interest. The Boston Society of Singers offers unusually fine translations of all the operas in their repertory, which are usually heard in their original tongues, and the pleasure of understanding the text is recorded on the faces of all who attend these delightful performances of opera in English at the Arlington Theatre. One could scarcely ask for clearer, more pleasing voices than those of Miss Lois Ewell, Miss Allyn and Helena Morrill, who will alternate in the role of Lenora, Rulon Robinson and Norman Arnold have been cast for the role of Manrico, and their lyric voices are well equipped for this romantic role. With Stanley Deacon and Robert Henry alternating as the Count di Luna, the cast gives promise of being the strongest ever assembled for "Il Trovatore" in English. Much has been said of the wonderful ensemble and chorus work at the Arlinton Theatre the past two weeks, but in Trovatore the patrons of opera in English will get a great treat, as the chorus has a greater opportunity from the standpoint of stage business and singing.

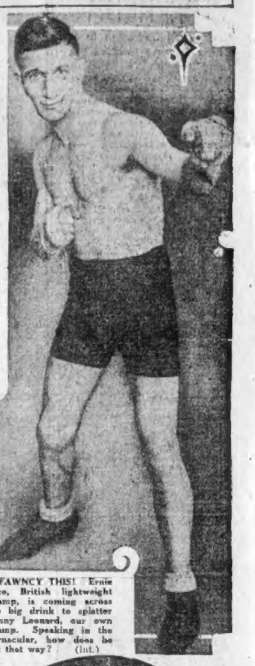
WINSOME WITCHES OF HUB STAGE AND CAMERA NEWS OF THE DAY

AFTER THE BALL IS OVER, ETC.! If you are going in for a strenuous social season you must have one of these ball gowns, the latest creation of bizarre Paree. Exhibited by the Misses Maynard and Natoson of "The Rose Girl," now playing at the Wilbur.

BERT M. JEWELL, rail chief of American Federation of Labor, warns that the trainmen will vote to the death if the roads force a strike. (U. & U.)



FAWNCY THIS! Ernie Rice, British lightweight champ, is coming across the big drink to splatter Benny Leonard, our own champ. Speaking in the vernacular, how does he get that way? (Int.)

VINE AND TEMPLE, smart and talented "vodevillians," who grace the stage of the Majestic Theatre next week. Klever kutups.

THE GIRL of just 100 years ago had "something" on the modern miss, but, really, who do you like, 1821, or

SMART IT! Miss 1921, with her scanty skirts and saucy air? Frances Halliday (left) and Dorothy Whitmore are pice as both, or either. (Int.)

A NEW and charming portrait study of Olive Tell, now landing her sweetness to the thriller, "In the Night Watch," at the Opera House.

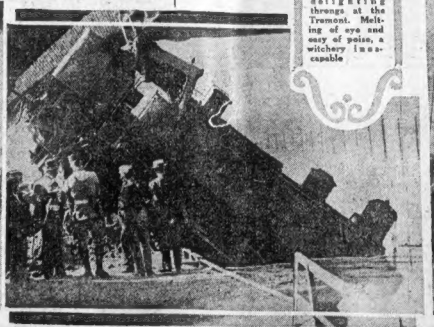
SOCIAL NOTE! Mrs. Bear entertained at tea the other afternoon at the Bronx Zoo, N. Y. Mrs. B. is shown greeting some of her visitors. This is a real photograph. (Int.)

PATIENCE—A GOLDEN VIRTUE! Imagine working 360 evenings to make this intricate model of Portsmouth Town Hall, England. That's what Charles Marequene, a Frenchman, did and it is a faithful replica of the original. It encases a phonograph of regulation size. Fashioned of more than 3,000 pieces of wood. (Int.)

DO YOUR STUFF! Miss K. Lidderdale, England's best field hockey player, shown training for match with Philadelphia champs. She'll have to step some to outshine our girls. (Int.)

STRIKE Up the Band, Etc.! Meet Capt. Bill, otherwise Mrs. Hannah Schuyler of Far Rockaway N. Y., second woman to receive a pilot's license at N. Y. She's going to take ladies out fishing. (Int.)

SWEET GENEVIEVE! Little Genevieve Tobin is perhaps the main reason why "Little Old New York" is delighting throngs at the Tremont. Melting of eye and easy of poise, a witchery immeasurable



THERE'S A LIGHT BURNING! Anthony Ajello of N. Y. working on the Caruso memorial candle which will burn for 5,000 years. Will be set up in Church of Madonna, Pompeii, Italy. (Int.)

THIS SWEET young child was playing opposite Chauncey Olcott. Now almost as famous in the movies as on the legitimate. Guess again? You're wrong. It's Mabel Taliaferro. (Int.)

DITCHED! Here is one of those rare photographs that impress one immediately with disaster, but which reveals no tragedy after all. The locomotive became derailed while crossing a bride just outside Paris and fell into a canal running to the Curcq River. The engineer and firemen jumped to safety. Photo shows the engine in the canal. (Int.)

HE'S A DOG-GONE GOOD DENTIST, HE IS! All the little doggies whose names are in the social register, or maybap the Almanac de Gotha, or in this case, the Horsebery, are entitled to have their molars repaired by Dr. Jopson of Orays Inn Road, England, who caters only to blue-blooded pups. The patient here is "Billy," a bull terrier, scion of one of England's most exclusive canine families. He has been eating too many bon bons and is having a gold crown fitted. (K.)

ENGLISH EXPERT PRAISES NEW NASH SIX

Impressed by Power and Picking Up Ability of Its Motor

C. P. Rockwell, the New England distributor for the Nash, gives out the following opinion of the Nash Six as voiced by an English expert:

"Owen John, British authority on motor cars, is the spokesman. The Autocar, a British motoring journal, is the medium through which he speaks. After citing the fact that he has been driving a Nash six-cylinder car, Mr. John says:

"Standing at rest or swooping along at 55 m. p. h., I cannot remember a sweeter engine; its power is glorious, its acceleration is swift, without being violent, and its picking up abilities are all that could be desired and nothing could be more elegant than the way in which, foot off the throttle, the engine comes into use as a brake.

"It has a starter that is quiet, its lamps give plenty of light and do not rattle, its tires are big and its springing when the weight in the car is properly distributed, would be hard to improve. Fast and quiet as it is on the level, I think its best point is on hills.

ASK MR. FIX IT

Dear Mr. Fixit:
I have a 1921 Dodge touring car. The motor has been all rebuilt, new pistons, wrist pins and wrist-pin bushings. Main bearings have been tightened, but there still seems to be a knock in the motor. The knock is not serious, but when I speed up to 25 or 30 miles per hour it makes that fact. It has plenty of power. What do you think makes that knock?
Haverhill.
Your trouble is probably in the starter chain. If you tighten it I think the knock will disappear.

Dear Mr. Fixit:
I have a 1917 Ford and would like to know why it runs through the carburetor when I crank it? It does not do that all the time, however. It also makes it register worse going at 20 miles or over. (2) It seems to have more power on gas, but makes a little clatter. Carburetor seems to be leaking a little. What can I do to stop it?—C. W. B., Hillis.
Firing through the carburetor is caused by one of two things—ignition trouble or too much mixture in the carburetor. The chatter is probably from loose bearings. (2)—To remedy your carburetor leak install new float needle and seat. Make sure all connections are tight.

Dear Mr. Fixit:
I have a 1918 Ford touring car which does not have the former speed and pep, especially climbing hills. How would you suggest going at it to locate the trouble? (2) Would you say that I need new rings or new valves? Valve rings are cheap. The piston rings are costly with carbon. The carburetor has to be adjusted frequently when not driving.—S. A. L., Boston.
It would be hard for me to tell just what to do when you haven't told just where the trouble lies. The fact that the gauge fell indicates that oil is getting by piston rings and therefore could not have been installed correctly. (2)—Install several overhauling carburetor and refitting rings.

REMOVAL WILL LENGTHEN LIFE OF TIRES

Should Be Cleaned and Wrapped Up When Being Stored for Winter

If you are going to put your car away for the Winter, says the United States Tire Company, there are a few important rules to follow if you want to find your tires in good condition when Spring time comes again.

In the first place the tires should be cleaned thoroughly to remove oil and grease. If you want to be especially kind to your tires, remove them from the car, deflate them, wrap them up in paper or cloth and store them in a cool, dry place away from the sunlight.

If you do not want to go to the trouble of removing the tires, jack up the car deflate the tires, and wrap them in covers of paper or cloth. Do not let the car stand on the tires all Winter or you will need a new set of tires in the Spring.

It is essential that tires be deflated. In cold weather an inflated tire has a tendency to "set" in condition under which the rubber is likely to break if bent or twisted out of the position or shape in which it has stood for a length of time.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Whiting-Tomes Wedding Today to Be One of Smartest

By BETTY ALDEN.

BOSTON society has witnessed many a fashionable nuptial ceremony this Fall, but none which may boast of more smartness than the wedding today of Miss Elizabeth St. John Whiting of Beacon street to Alexander Hadden Tomes of New York in Emmanuel Church.

The bride, a member of the 1917 Sewing Circle and the Vincent Club, is distinctly attractive, being tall and slender and of purest blonde type. She is the daughter of Mrs. William Sawin Whiting, who accompanied her on a trip to Europe this Summer. Last Winter Mrs. Whiting and her daughter were at Santa Barbara, Cal.

Miss Whiting has chosen for her attendants her little niece, Marie Audibert of New York, and the following six bridesmaids: Elspeth Tomes of London, Katherine Knapp of New York, Anita Sturgis of Commonwealth avenue, Faith Richmond of Commonwealth avenue, Mary Burr of Chestnut street and Cornelia Fiske of Commonwealth avenue.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Alexander Tomes of New York and London, who, with their two daughters, were in Paris last Winter. He is a Harvard man, class of '13, and has chosen Gilbert O. Browne, Harvard '19, to serve as best man. The ushers include: William M. Carson, Jr., Bradord B. Locke, Stephen B. Smart, Alexander Henderson, C. Gouverneur Hoffman, Henry B. Gardner, William F. Phillips, W. Fellows Morgan, Jr., all of New York; Samuel M. Felton, 3d, of Boston, Chase H. Davis of Cincinnati, Richard B. Wigglesworth of Milton and Louis Curtis, Jr., of Boston.

A reception will be held at the bride's home, No. 326 Beacon street, following the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Tomes will go to China for their wedding journey, where they will remain for several months.

Miss Stanwood, daughter of Mrs. Eben Caldwell Stanwood, and a bridesmaid at today's wedding, is a sister debutante of Miss Whiting. She has been one of the most enthusiastic of the young society women who have gone to Labrador to work at Dr. Grenfell's mission.

She is a close friend of Miss Katherine Pollard, who was also at Dr. Grenfell's mission, and last Summer the two young women were in charge of the booth at the Army and Navy Festival held at Pingree Field, Wenham, at which articles made at the mission were sold. Shortly afterwards Miss Stanwood and Miss Pollard were put in charge of the mammoth costume ball given the latter part of August at the Hawthorne Inn, East Gloucester, for the benefit of Dr. Grenfell's mission.

Mary Burr, another of Miss Whiting's attendants and also a sister "deb," seems to be decidedly popular as a bridesmaid. I recall her as serving in that capacity at the wedding last June of Miss Agnes Grew and Alexander Wheeler. The ceremonial, which took place in St. John's Church, Beverly Farms, was unquestionably one of the most notable on the North shore's social calendar for the entire season. It is interesting to note that Cornelius Fiske, who is included in the group of today's attendants at Emmanuel, was also one of the former Agnes Grew's bridesmaids. Miss Fiske, by the way, has but recently returned from a trip abroad with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fiske, and her sister, Rosanna Duncan Fiske.

On November 12 Miss Burr will be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Lawrence Hewlett and Robert Page Burr, the ceremony taking place in Lawrence, L. I.

Miss Elizabeth Caswell, who will dance at Copley-Plaza on Woman's Day.

Random Notes of Prominent Folk in Town and Country

Mrs. John L. Thorndike of Marlboro street and Beverly Farms is at Hot Springs with Mrs. Augustus Neal Rantoul of Beacon street.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge was entertained at tea on Thursday by Mrs. William C. Rivers, wife of the commandant at Fort Myer, who invited Mrs. Coolidge to meet the officers at the post and their wives and neighbors from Virginia.

Mrs. Richard C. Dixey and Mrs. Robert Winthrop, both of Boston and Lenox, were among the first prize winners for pompons at the floral exhibition held at the Lenox Town Hall under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of that town. The $12,000 orchid display of Arthur N. Cooley of Pittsfield has probably never been equalled [illegible]hes—one hundred varieties occupying 160 square yards of space on the stage being displayed.

Miss Louise Inches, daughter of Mrs. Charles Inches, is studying at Radcliffe this year, living at Cambridge during the week and spending the week-ends with her mother at the Inches' country place at Medfield, which they plan to keep open until Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop T. Hodges have reopened their home on Main street in Concord, following a season spent at Nahant. Their son is again enrolled in the Middlesex School.

Among the men who will ride at the Myopia Hunt Club race today are Alvin Bostwell, Neil Rice, William Almy, Jr., Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., Albert C. Burrage, Jr., Ronald Tree and G. O. Heffinger.

BALDWINSVILLE MAN IS A HUNTER AT 86

Baldwinsville, Oct. 22.—Age should be no barrier to the pursuit of the pheasant and grouse. J. Grant Lund, eighty-six years old, took out a hunter's license today. He is believed to be the oldest hunter in the State.

MILFORD FIRE CAPTAIN IS ASKED TO RESIGN

Milford, Oct. 22.—Perley S. Johnson, captain of Combination Co. No. 1, on a dozen years and recognized as Milford's best fire fighter, has been asked to resign by the board of firengineers of which his brother-in-law, John A. McKenble, is chief. The news caused a sensation

MOTHER SEEKS SON MISSING 3 WEEKS

Parents Fear for Safety of West Newton Boy Who Disappeared October 1

Mystery surrounds the disappearance and whereabouts of Charles Milligan of No. 21 Cottage place, West Newton, who dropped from sight on Saturday, October 1.

The boy is sixteen years old and was employed in the supply department of the Boston American. Shortly before noon on October 1 he was sent on an errand to the telephone company's office on Milk street. He never returned, and no trace of him has been found since. Police of Boston and surrounding cities and towns have been searching for the boy as well as the police of New York city.

When the boy disappeared he had in his possession his week's pay which he had just drawn, and at first it was thought by his parents that he had either gone to the Brockton fair or had gone to New York to see the World's Series. Relatives in Rockland and other towns say they have not seen the boy.

The boy's father, Joseph Milligan, has canvassed the hospitals of Greater Boston, fearing the boy may have been injured. His parents are frantic and his mother is becoming wan and haggard with the strain, and begs her boy to come home.

The boy is sixteen years old, weighs 120 pounds and is about five feet and five inches tall. When he left he was dressed in a green suit, short trousers, black shoes and stockings and a black and white cap. He has blue eyes and curly chestnut colored hair.

COLD WEATHER HINTS FOR CARE OF MOTOR

Now that the cold weather is coming it is important that the motor be given proper attention. The carburetor may need a little attention. The radiator certainly needs some anti-freezing solution. A mixture of one quart denatured alcohol and two parts water is quite satisfactory, although there are several preparations on the market that are specially prepared for this service. A lighter grade of oil may also be found necessary for the very cold weather later on.

ORLANDINI TO MAKE ADDRESS IN NEWTON

Italian Army Officer Speaks Sunday at Trinity Church on "Disarmament"

Captain Vittorio Orlandini will speak in Trinity Church, Newton Centre, tomorrow evening at 7:15, on "Italy and Disarmament," in the third of the series of Disarmament Services being held on Sunday evenings in that church.

The following Sunday night, October 30, it is expected will be Chinese Night, when it is hoped that Dr. Tehyi Hsieh, who is one of the Chinese commissioners to the conference at Washington, will present the case for China. Dr. Hsieh has tentatively accepted the invitation to speak.

British Night will be Sunday evening, Nov. 13 and the speaker will be Professor Kirstop Lake.

Professor Lake is an Englishman and a brilliant Oxford scholar. He was professor in the University of Leyden, Holland, and is now at Harvard. He will state the case for Great Britain.

"What Japan Wants" will be discussed at a later date by a Japanese.

The Friendly Glow

WE make mistakes and we know it.

Tell us, that we may keep on reducing points of friction.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston

The NASH FOUR at $1045

presents the most striking contrast of high quality and low price that the industry has ever known.

A big, handsome, roomy car of slim, graceful lines, amply powered and slung on unusually long semi-elliptic springs, the Nash Four was designed and built as the quality leader among high grade four-cylinder cars. Even at its original price of $1395, its remarkable value was apparent in every feature.

In quality it is comparable only with the very highest grade four-cylinder automobiles.

Yet in price, at its new low figure of $1045, it is virtually on a par with the accepted popular priced car market.

You Expect More in a Nash

You expect the power, flexibility and ease of handling for which the Nash Perfected Valve-in-Head Motor is so widely famous. You expect the beauty of body design and finish which always characterizes a Nash product.

And you expect the riding comfort of a big car, even over the roughest roads.

And You Get It for Less Money

In every attribute of appearance, performance and riding comfort, this car will exceed your expectations.

The new low price, $1045, for such unheard-of value, is possible only through greatly increased production and a slender margin of profit.

Drive this car today—test its speed on some smooth stretch of road, try its power and acceleration on some stiff hill, then drive it through traffic and observe how smoothly it throttles down.

MALDEN FIGHTS FOR WIN OVER CAMBRIDGE IN GRID CLASH

By FRED C. LANE

As a general rule, Malden High reserves its best for the annual clash with Medford on Thanksgiving Day, but the scheduled contest with Cambridge Latin at Russell Field, Cambridge, today was expected to eclipse all the fuss and frills that go to prepare the team for its final struggle.

Both have jammed in more work in the past week than has taken place all season all because so much is at stake. Neither has tasted defeat; they are tied for leadership of the league with Newton and Medford and a win by either will go a long way in deciding just who will be in the commanding position at the season's certain fall.

The plans and preparations that have taken place at the stamping grounds of each team this past week outrivals that of any Turkey Day preparation. Former stars from both teams have been assisting the coaches in grooming the players for the first real ordeal of the year.

Both teams were on edge for what they call the deciding game of the season. Both coaches dwelt on the best part of Friday in running through the signals and skull practice. Fandom in general and supporters from the high schools have been following closely the activities of the teams with the result that the Cambridge school authorities have made plans to entertain the largest crowd of football rooters to ever crowd the gates of this reservation.

So fine are both teams drawn for the fray that a tie score will not be at all surprising. Many are of the opinion that but one touchdown would be registered by either team. Much responsibility rested on the shoulders of "Tuber" Cronin and "Bobby" Lewin, both of whom have excelled at dropkicking.

The Captain hopes rested on the shoulders of Zarakov, the most feared back in the league. In Coach Sullivan's estimation Zarakov and the fast Cataldi backfield face two of the best schoolboy ends in the game in Bob Rindge and Captain Al Butler. Their work at Haverhill has been the talk of schoolboy circles for the past month. Much stress is laid on these wing men to break up the Cambridge backfield before it gets under way. Zarakov is nursing a bruised leg but is planned to be in the "doings" at all cost. It is a fact that the injured member is still sensitive and will not stand the hard gruelling that was sure to take place.

On the line Malden is forced to give ground. Cambridge had an advantage of some pounds on the charges of Coach O'Donnell but since they held the Haverhill troupe in worthy fashion it is yet to be seen just what will take place Friday.

In the backfield both teams are on par with one another, which cause each to perform at their best. There is no impression on either line. Only in the wing positions did Malden have the advantage over the Cantab. In fact all was in readiness for the stiffest encounter of the season to date in the interscholastic calendar.

Chick Shea for Cambridge is the surprise of the Cantab fandom. His first year as a donner of moleskins has made him a marked man for college coaches at the termination of the season. His style in running the team and skirting the ends has given the supporters of the Cambridge Latin team more than one chance to rise and cheer for the fleet-footed general.

HIGGINS SCORES GOAL FROM FIELD

B. C. High Defeats Latin, Three to Nothing, on Successful Drop Kick

Boston College High eleven sent Boston Latin School down to defeat, 3 to 0, at University Heights yesterday. Captain Higgins sent the ball between the goal posts for a goal from field from the 32-yard line for the only score of the game. That happened in the first half.

The Maroon and Gold outfit outplayed the Latin team in the first half of the contest. A delayed pass used all the time by B. C. High resulted in giving the ball to the Latin tackles.

B. C. High rushed the ball from their danger zone where it had been kicked by Nordberg to within halling distance of the Latin goal line. Quarterback Malloy signalled for a drop kick from a difficult angle but Higgins was equal to the hard task. Taking plenty of time he shot the ball high and fair. The B. C. High rooters cheered for five minutes.

JOHN N. WILLYS SEES SWING TO PROSPERITY

Overland Dealers Listen to Spirited Talk on Work and More Work

The Overland dealers who were present at the meeting held in the salesrooms of the Connell & McKone Company last Wednesday had the pleasure of listening to a spirited talk by John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company of Toledo, and he briefly stated the remedy for the recent depression in business to be "work and then more work."

Mr. Willys said that he was now back in the harness and expected to stay there for some time and actively direct the policies of the Willys-Overland Company. It is Mr. Willys' firm belief that general business will be 75 per cent. normal next year. Mr. Willys said in part:

"There were 2,225,000 automobiles sold last year, which is 225,000 more than in any other year. It can be done again, only with even a greater number of sales, by work and fighting for sales. The faint-hearted would say there is no room. But consider these figures. In 1913 there was one car for every seventy-eight people in the United States; in 1914, one for every fifty-seven; 1915, one for twenty-six; 1916, one per twenty-five; 1917, one per twenty-four; 1918, one per fifteen; 1919, one per fifteen, and in 1920, one per fourteen population.

"In North Dakota there is one car for every seven inhabitants. If this state could be brought to the point there would be an immediate market for 6,000,000 cars. As it is, there is a replacement need annually for 1,500,000 cars. It can be seen from this that we are much nearer the point of saturation is still far distant.

SWING TOWARDS PROSPERITY.

"Business conditions look much better everywhere. The bottom was reached and now things are going in the other direction. The pendulum has passed the lowest point. Watch for the enthusiasm, for the energy season this afternoon at Haverhill in of the nation's country. This pendulum is full on its course for the upper swing. It will move slowly, but surely. The American people always buys best on a rising market.

"Basic reserves are much better. In fact they are more favorable than at any time in four years. The cotton crop is the fourth has revived the automobile industry there. The textile and leather industries report increased improvement, and as for the Willys Overland Co., we have reduced our indebtedness from $42,000,000 to $15,000,000, and will pay off $2,500,000 more on November 1. The August business in the automobile industry was 80 per cent or normal."

At this meeting the announcement was made that the Willys-Overland Company had bought the business of the Connell & McKone Company, for eleven years the Overland distributors for New England.

CHANGE DUE TO POLICY.

This change was necessitated to conform to the policy adopted by the Overland Company this year in establishing branches throughout the country. Connell & McKone will retain the retail business of the Overland and Willys-Knight in Worcester, Quincy and Manchester, N. H.

The new officers to take charge of the local branch, which will be conducted as a separate business, will be announced McKone in charge of Metropolitan Boston and assistant to Hollis Currup; C. R. Arenschiell, wholesale manager, and C. F. Boles, service manager.

Messrs. Connell and McKone were warmly eulogized by John N. Willys and also by William L. Colt of New York, the eastern branch manager, who acted as toastmaster. About 350 dealers sat down at the luncheon which followed.

SWAMPSCOTT AN EASY WINNER OVER CHELSEA

Swampscott High won easily over Chelsea High, 28 to 6, on the Everett High field, on Admirals' Field, in the North Shore League series yesterday. The playing of Captain Hollis Currant, the Swampscott fullback, was the feature. He scored four touchdowns, two in each opening period and saw in the final quarter, and kicked goal from the touchdowns. His fifty-yard run in the first five minutes of play, when he skirted Chelsea's left end for a touchdown, was the feature.

Haverhill, Oct. 22.—St. James tackles the hardest opponent of the Worcester High School of Commerce, high school champions of the "Heart of the Commonwealth," Commerce beat Everett High, 2 to 1.

Worcester Commerce team is one of the best in the State. St. James will be opposed by not only weight but speed, and will have to move faster than in any previous combat.

St. James and the Worcester teams have been great rivals. There are three teams from that city on the parish high schedule this year, Classical, Commerce and St. John's High. Classical, the weakest, was beaten by St. James handily, but Commerce made a larger score on Classical than St. James did.

DEMPSEY GROWS FAT UNDER 'NO WORK' ORDER

Champion Anxious to Fight, but Manager Holds Out for Big Purses

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Jack Dempsey is piling under orders, growing fat and bringing the fear to his admirers that he is going to whip himself out of the heavyweight championship.

Jack has been loafing ever since the Carpentier fight, and outside of a rauderville engagement hasn't a serious thing to think about.

Beyond that he has done nothing in the way of work, except an occasional game of golf, a bit of tennis and an occasional run of a mile or so.

Jack sleeps a lot, eats a lot, idles a lot. And, as a result, on his visit to Chicago this week he showed that a little fat is gathering around his shoulders and in his arms, a bulge growing around his waist line and his color is not that of the olden days.

The champion isn't dissipating, but he is loafing, a schedule of life that great trainers insist is fatal to an athlete. He has been posing in the role of a "society man," having been the guest of honor at numerous dinners, outings and evening parties.

As a result his mind has become more occupied with social life than with the grim business of fighting.

Left to his own devices, Dempsey probably would have gone around staging battle royals, as he loves to mix it. It is said, however, that his manager seems more intent on making a society man out of Dempsey than have him continue as a warrior, demanding so much for the champion's fighting services that no promoter in America can meet it.

TRAFFIC RULES FOR GAME IN STADIUM

Police Make Arrangements for Handling Automobiles and Taxis Today

For the Harvard-Penn State game today, as well as for the games on October 29, November 12 and November 19, arrangements for handling automobile traffic have been made with the Cambridge, Boston and Metropolitan Park police Departments as follows:

After 1:30 p. m., Boylston street, Cambridge, the Anderson Bridge and North Harvard street, Brighton, will be closed to all automobile traffic from Mount Auburn street, Cambridge, to Western avenue, Brighton. The only automobile gate admitting to Soldiers Field will be on the Metropolitan parkway. This may be reached from Boston via Commonwealth avenue to Brighton, thence to North Beacon street to Everett street to Parkway, or cars may turn off Everett street to the right at Western avenue and park in the Brighton Playground which has charges or in private parking spaces beyond, a limited number of automobiles may park on the parkway on the Cambridge side of the river.

Taxis and other automobiles delivering passengers coming via Cambridge from Boston will be required to unload and turn at DeWolfe square on the Parkway, about 300 yards below the end of the Anderson bridge. This approach is the quickest for taxis from Boston.

After the game all cars parked on Soldiers Field and on the Boston Parkway west of North Harvard street must leave by the Parkway westward.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 22.—Whether the monster Syracuse eleven is to weather the first half of the gridiron season without suffering its customary defeat or two was to be decided this afternoon when the Orange eleven faced Glen Warner's Panthers.

Syracuse ruled the favorite in the wagering before the game, for Pitt has been scored upon in every game this season and suffered one defeat at the hands of Lafayette, while Syracuse has been mowing down its early season opponents with ease.

Coach Warner, however, has been pointing his team for this contest and there are few willing to are counting on the Panthers to win. Each team starts its most powerful lineup, as the men for both sleeves have been singularly free from injuries this season.

PALS AS KIDS NOW CHUMS AS CHAMPS

Joe Lynch and Joe Moore Born and Brought Up in Same House

New York, Oct. 22.—Two champions were born—are born, rather. They are Joe Lynch, who was bantamweight champion until recently, and who may be again, and Joe Moore, the champion skater.

These kids were "born in the same house, over on Forty-seventh street, and grew up together. Oddly enough, their won their championships within a few weeks of each other.

When they were youngsters, one skating, the other boxing, they were great pals, and used to sit and tell each other their ambitions.

Later they joked each other about when they would make good. When Moore won his championship he phoned at Lynch, and within a few weeks Lynch won his two champions had a celebration together.

They had just one battle—and this was when Moore defeated Lynch one day that he never would be champion. They had their fists up to speed, when Pat McDonald, the champion weight thrower, who happened to be on duty nearby, rushed in and split them up.

Which is one of the few times that three champions in three different fields ever mixed up in one scrap.

Lynch vows that Moore is the greatest skater in the world, and never misses a chance to see him race, and Moore declares Lynch is the greatest fighter in his class, and always is in the front row rooting when Joe boxes.

KANSAS DEFEATS TENDLER BY DECISION

New York, Oct. 22.—Rocky Kansas decisively outpointed Lew Tendler in a fifteen-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

Rocky knocked Tendler down in the ninth round with a right hook to the jaw. The southpaw punch knocked Tendler flat but did not dase him for he jumped up before the referee could start counting.

In the seventh round Kansas opened a cut over Tendler's left eye. Tendler protested to the referee that Kansas used his head.

It was Kansas almost all the way through the full fifteen rounds and Tendler got the beating of his life.

CHAMPION STILL UNBEATEN IN POCKET BILLIARD PLAY

Philadelphia, Oct. 22.—Of the ten yard tournament, Ralph Greenleaf, champion, alone remained undefeated when play started today. Greenleaf has won three games. James Maturo of New York stood second with three victories and onedefeat.

Today's schedule called for matches between Hennie Alien, Kansas City, and Michael Kovach, Trenton, N. J.; Jerome Keough, Rochester, N. Y., and Arthur Church, Yonkers, N. Y.; Arthur Woods, Minneapolis, and Thomas A. Hosmun, Los Angeles, and Greenleaf and Walter Franklin, Kansas City.

NEWTON RULES FAVORITE OVER MEDFORD IN GRIDIRON TUSSLE

Newton, with its combination o f trick plays and fake combinations, was favored to win over Medford at Claflin Field, Newton, in today's encounter.

Neither team has been scored upon to date and both are members of the forgesome that are struggling to hold their gain in the Suburban League race.

Because of the one backfield that Newton is touting this season, many are of the opinion that the combination of Garrity and Stafford will shine to their best. On the offensive the Jordan City lads were expected to outshine the visitors, while the ballder defence of the Medford aggregation was sure to be much in evidence.

Coach Mansfield has drilled his men to unadvantage in following the ball, resulting in many touchdowns being made by the Medford schoolboys on the mistakes of their opponents. Newton is the one team in the Suburban League that has yet persisted to fumble. The passing of Stafford in the quarterback position has done away with the most serious handicap that can befall a team.

*eleif rawmitted

On the other hand, Medford in its pre-season games had a tendency to make this big mistake when the issue called for a score, but the ability of all eleven men to follow the pigskin has saved the day for Coach Mansfield's outfit on more than one occasion.

Captain Gillis at centre for Medford is an old hand at the game. Newton ran up a 10-to-0 score on Everett by its many trick formations, while Medford was able to make but one touchdown. The Bowen brothers at guard and Nichols at centre for Newton are a stone wall when on the defence and will make their presence felt when their team is carrying the ball.

HARVARD FRESHMEN PLAY AGAINST EXETER ELEVEN

Harvard freshmen will meet Exeter Academy this afternoon on Soldiers Field at 3. Both teams are undefeated, the Crimson being minus Herb Ellis and Roger Doherty, while Captain Joe McGlone of Natick and Carl Landell of Worcester are missing from the visiting lineup.

AMATEURS BATTLE AT RIVETON A. A. SHOW

The Riverton A. A. will stage an open amateur boxing tournament at the Chelsea Theatre tonight. There will be tussles at 108, 125 and 145 pounds. A large number of entries have been received and some spirited battles are expected.

TECH WINS FROM HARVARD IN TWO RUNS

Varsity and Freshman Teams Winners in Cross-Country Races

The opening of the season for both Tech and Harvard varsity and freshman harriers, held at the Belmont course today resulted in a double victory for Tech. Tech varsity completely eclipsed the Crimson over the six mile course in the time of 34:13 to 40, and the freshmen surprised the Harvard yearlings with a score of 15 to 42.

Captain Elmer Sanborn of Tech broke the tape first with his two star teammates, Arthur Flanders and Bob Hendrie, close behind him. Harvard's first man, J. D. Harris, pulled in fourth a minute and a half behind the leader, while Ellis, Ellis Robertson, Foore and Anderson of Tech and Lutz of Harvard. Then followed five Harvard men for last positions.

Sanborn crossed the finish line in 34:23, the best time for the Belmont course for a number of years. Flanders was less than fifty feet back of Sanborn and finished in 34:32. Hendrie was a minute behind him.

Captain Sanborn and Captain Bemis of Harvard took the lead at the start, but when the ground reached the three-mile line four Tech men were leading, and in the last mile Harris of Harvard, came up to third position, Captain Bemis came in in twelfth.

The summary: First, E. E. Sanborn, Tech, time 34:23; second, A. L. Flanders, Tech, time 34:32; third, R. H. Hendrie, Tech, time 35:34; fourth, J. D. Harris, Harvard, time 35:53; fifth, Pat McDonald, Tech, time 36:08; sixth, R. A. Ellis, Harvard, time 36:08; seventh, L. H. Poore, Tech, time 36:15; eighth, W. C. Anderson, Tech, time 36:23; ninth, A. L. Coburn, Harvard, time 36:35; tenth, M. L. Pratt, Harvard, time 36:42; eleventh, J. W. Burke, Harvard, time 36:55; twelfth, Capt. G. Bemis, Harvard, time 37:00; thirteenth, W Duane, Harvard, time 37:01; fourteenth, R. R. Holt, Tech, time 37:09 1-5; fifteenth, W. E. Eaton, Harvard, time 37:28 2-5.

BABE RUTH GIVES UP BARNSTORMING TRIP

New York, Oct. 22.—Babe Ruth is a repentant fence-buster today. The home run king has given up his barnstorming tour and is expected to go to Chicago in a few days to see Judge Landis to try to explain matters.

Ruth quit his tour at Scranton, Pa., after a long conference with Colonel Ti Huston of the Yankees. He is said to have admitted that he saw his duty clearly defying the baseball rules and baseball's high commissioner.

HARVARD SYSTEM FACES ITS HARDEST TEST

Harvard's football system today faces a test nothing like it has been called upon to do for a dozen years.

The Crimson, with a lineup composed of only three men, who have been regarded as regulars, has a gigantic task on down the heavy Penn State team, which has also the advantage of an excellent coaching system, the head of which is Hugo Bezdek, also a national figure in winning football.

Harvard on paper is badly disorganized, but Percy Haughton and Jack Crookston, the brilliant pair of ends, Tubby Drew, the husky, aggressive right guard, Charlie Tierney, the six-foot, 197-pound fighting tackle, Percy Jenkins, the premier running back of the whole squad, and Frank Houllard, a fine defensive performer, are the regular men who cannot possibly play on account of injuries.

This is according to word sponsored by varsity manager Higgins, who added, however, that there is a bare possibility that Tierney may be in the game as a substitute. Substitutes Pfeffman and Kernan are also hurt.

On the other hand Penn State has its full strength with one exception, Captain Ernest Buell, the dashing fullback, one strong performer on the defense, who had to be left home suffering with an abscess of the throat.

The case against Penn State, however, is this. While they have the advantage in weight, about eight pounds in the rushline, the team is a green one, unused to playing before the $75,000 house of 40,000 people who will grace them this afternoon. Under the excitement of such conditions Hugo Bezdek's warning words of "keep your head" may have no effect and the Nittany lads may go to pieces.

Penn State has chosen a tendency to fumble, but proves to no more than Harvard has. The team, with the most alert men on the lookout for a fumble, may jam over the score that will decide the game.

Bezdek's pupils have proved also they are weak on a defence for the forward pass. In last Saturday's game against Lehigh, which proved an easy victory, Penn State, like Penn State, Lehigh crossed the Penn State goal line by traveling 65 yards, using nothing but forward passes. There were eight of them, and only two proved failures.

Harvard's reputation, a menace to all comers, particularly smaller teams with even veteran players, again must be taken into consideration.

But Harvard, shot to pieces, must reckon on a rush for opposed to them that has gained consistently against all comers, even though the opponents, admittedly with the exception of Lehigh, are inferior to the teams the Crimson has met.

They will be outweighed in the forward line with veterans like Bentz and Barr opposing inexperienced players. The Penn State wings Buford and McCollum, are veterans, while the latter's hard working quarter, Killinger, are serving their backfield, Ligtner, are serving their second year in the game.

All in all, it is a most optimistic person who will take the Harvard end today under such discouraging conditions, but the system, plus individual brilliancy on the part of one or two men, may win.

Janin of the baseball team and Macomber, second string ends are the Harvard wings today. The tackles will be Captain Kane, always optimistic, and Al Ladd, who left the college infirmary Friday morning. At guards Frieke Brown and Charley Hubbard have the call, the latter substituting for the cold-burdened Grew.

Eskie Clark, a 165-pounder, and a daddy of a bouncing baby girl, has dashed Stan Bradford out of the way for center. Clark is all right, and that is what counted in his favor.

Princtown, N. J., Oct. 22.—Alonzo Stagg's Chicago eleven, one of the three undefeated stams of the Western Conference, expected to start right in where the Navy left off, and chalk up another victory over Bill Roper's Tigers at the Palmer Memorial field on today.

That Chicago would realize on that ambition was extremely doubtful, however, The Tigers, since their defeat of the early season has departed and they have settled down to hard work, grimly determined that no other defeat shall mar their 1921 record.

There was some doubt regarding the starting of Don Lourie and Hank Garrity, but both have recovered from their injuries sufficiently to be sent into the game in the event their services are needed. Snively, who did not participate in the Navy game, is back at his old post at end.

The Boston College team will undergo a severe test this afternoon when it faces the strong, husky Detroit University eleven on Braves Field. The Maroon and Gold seven will battle against odds, having not yet fully recovered from the effects of the long trip to Texas.

Coach Cavanaugh has not held any scrimmage practice all week, but has spent most of the time in instructing his players in the art of defense and in coaching the team as what to expect from the Detroiters.

Far from being confident of victory, Cavanaugh has told his men that they must play 160 per cent. football all the way through in order to win. It will take every ounce of strength on the part of the B. C. warriors to stop the Detroit backs, and only by hard fight they can summon to break through the strong Detroit line.

Detroit considers the game with Boston College the big contest of the season. The coach admits that all the games for the past year have been played with the object of getting into perfect trim for the game against Boston College.

Any kind of a victory will suit Detroit. If Detroit wins, it will have established itself as a first-class team and greatly enhance its reputation in the West. If a loser, the Detroiters will offer no alibis, but will gladly admit that Boston College has the better team.

The Detroit team that will start against Boston College will average 175 pounds. In this respect, the two teams will be pretty evenly matched. Coach Duffy admits that his team has not met with any opposition thus far that was stiff enough to bring out the full strength of his team. The contest this afternoon will prove a real test for the Detroit players.

"We come hopeful, rather than confident," says Coach Duffy. Against this hope will be arrayed Cavanaugh's eleven wills to win' And the will to win will be a big factor in determining the outcome of the contest for Boston College.

Much interest has been aroused by the game this afternoon, and it is expected that between fifteen and twenty thousand will witness the contest. A special train from Detroit arrived yesterday with two hundred rooters, and the fact that many of the Detroit team are local boys is bound to attract a big crowd

GRAMMAR SCHOOL TEAMS HAVE AN EXCITING GAME

The Concord Centre grade school team won the grammar school gridiron championship yesterday afternoon, defeating for the second time, the Concord Junction grade eleven, 12 to 7, in an exciting contest, on the Concord Centre playground. Dempsey, playing quarter for the Centre, made two touchdowns for the winners, and Bouchard, fullback, for the other eleven, made its touchdown and goal after touchdown.

M'DUBURY

Says Statistics Show That a Lot of People Eat Themselves Into Their Graves, but It's a Happy Death

People are always taking up some new kind of a fad and the latest one on the market is dieting. A person can't be stylish now unless he is hungry.

And a lot of people in town here are right up to date

The doctor told them they would have to go without meat, but the butcher told them first.

The dairy cut out their butter and eggs long before the physician got a chance.

A lot of people go on a milk diet and drink nothing but three or four quarts of milk a day. They'd be out of luck if the cow went on a diet

The doctor told one guy to cut out all sweet things, so he immediately broke his engagement with his girl.

He has to go on a diet now in order to pay her for breach of promise

You're not supposed to eat any solid or hard food and it's tough for a person to give up cocounuts.

You're not supposed to touch anything with starch in it, but it's carrying it too far when you wear soft shirts.

There's only one vegetable that you can eat and the doctor lets you choose between it.

You can have oatmeal, eggs and milk for breakfast; eggs, milk and oatmeal for lunch, and milk, oatmeal and eggs for dinner

If you order them in the same routine at every meal they get tiresome.

You should eat only eggs that come from the country, but be sure they come from this country

Statistics show that a lot of people eat themselves into their graves. But it's a happy death.

Too many cream puffs and chocolate eclairs will take you to the cemetery. That's nothing; so will the street car.

Many a man has been kept awake by coffee. He didn't drink it, but his roommate did

Coffee is bad for the heart, but so is marriage.

Some people died to keep out of the grave, but they go into debt to the doctor, so they're in the hole one way or the other.

Dieting used to be hard, but the doctors have come along and made starving to death fashionable.

DARTMOUTH ELEVEN NEW FOR COLUMBIA GAME

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 22.—Dartmouth is ready to place its new team against Columbia today, and everything points to a close game.

It is still rumored that Coach Buck O'Neil of the New York eleven intends to protest to the officials that Dartmouth's shift is illegal, or at least to instruct them to watch that point with unusual care Dartmouth coaches have little to say, simply remarking that every official so far this year has found the shift complies with the rules.

The Green will be handicapped by the loss of several regulars, while Columbia will start with the same team which went so well last week. Captain Jim Robertson, Pete Hurd, Neidlinger and Eddie Edwards will not be on the team, while the services of two of the most reliable second string men, Gordon at end and Goletsin at tackle, will be lost.

The Green team has been completely reorganized within the past week. Swede Swenson has been moved from guard to centre, Don Moore from tackle to guard, the ends have been shifted nearly every day, and Siegfried has replaced Edwards at fullback

Dartmouth has been drilled especially on forward pass work in secret practice all week, and it is possible that the Green coaches will order an overhead game

Buck O'Neil has also promised to spring some startling surprises outside of his protest of the shift, and should make the game interesting Dartmouth has been well trained to meet freak games, while all season the Green defence has been well nigh impregnable.

Columbia will find Chick Burke, star halfback of the Green team, and Siegfried hard to stop, while it may find the forward pass hard to combat

Both teams held signal drill yesterday. Dartmouth students held a monster mass meeting last night and the support of all was pledged

Worcester, Oct. 22.—The quality of Cleo O'Donnell's capable Holy Cross eleven was dde for another testing this afternoon when it engaged Georgetown in the first game of the Catholic college round robin series

The latter team, coached by Exendine, the former Carlisle Indian player, has met only weak opponents thus far this season, but has succeeded in rolling up such sizable scores that there is no question of its rare power

Georgetown is said to possess one of the largest and most capable squads ever to appear at the Washington university. Its line averages over 190 pounds to the man, and in McQuade and Kenyon it boasts two veteran backfield men of established quality.

70,000 JAM YALE BOWL TO SEE ARMY BATTLE

By CHARLES E. PARKER

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 22.—The greatest mid-season football gathering in all history—70,000 persons—assembled at New Haven today to witness the promising contest between Tad Jones' bulky Blue eleven and the West Point cadets.

The game is expected to determine Yale's place in 1921 college football, for it is the first contest in which the reorganized Elis meet an opponent of equal size and nearly equal strength

If Yale wins today, and wins in an impressive manner, Yale can be counted upon to figure strongly in the approaching "Big Three" contests

And the Elis expect to win. They believe Tad Jones has overcome the faults which have marked the play of Yale teams of recent years, and that he has evolved a sound and sure football system

Whether such beliefs are founded on facts should be indicated before nightfall, and Yale men then will turn toward the approaching Princeton and Harvard games either confident of Yale triumphs or sadly anticipating another season of wasted effort and wasted material

The Army is in prime shape for today's battle, and although Coach Daly of West Point is not likely to start his star backfield man, French, the latter is reported to be in condition to enter the lineup should his services be necessary.

The Yale army will not be quite the same as that which started the season for the Elis. Norris, first string centre until he was injured, is again in action, a physical condition, but Landis, his substitute, has been performing so ably that Jones planned to start the latter at the pivot position

Cross, who was slated for a regular guard position; Into and Quatie, who were considered Yale's leading backfield men, also will be on the side lines when the game gets under way, although all three may be used in the course of the fray.

Charley O'Hearn, Yale's star quarterback candidate, is still another who will wear a blue blanket on the side lines at the start of the contest, but who is ready to assume the quarterback role whenever Coach Jones sees fit to call upon him.

The Yale lineup at the start of the game will contain but three men who won varsity letters last Fall. They are Cruikshank, the left guard, and Captain Aldrich and Dod Jordan, halfbacks.

The Cadets will have a half dozen first string veterans of last season and three star transfer men in Garbisch of Washington and Jefferson McLaren of Pittsburgh and Wood of Johns Hopkins

The entire student body of West Point, with the Army band and the celebrated Army Mule, arrived in New Haven early today, and many army and government notables and General Dias of Italy were to witness the Yale Bowl contest

Tufts will face Norwich at Tufts oval, at three o'clock this afternoon. The Medford collegians are confident of victory but, will be weakened by the loss of Tony Vita, the husky tackle. Last year Buck Macchia scored the only touchdown by taking the ball on the kickoff.

Vermont's victor over Tufts last Saturday has inspired the Norwich eleven. It is certain to be a hotly contested game and nip and tuck from the moment the battle starts.

Coach Parks has doubled the team into a smooth-working machine. Norwich has a formidable aggregation in the backfield, Smith, Dewitt and Sparrow will keep hustling.

FITTONS OPEN SEASON WITH W. ROXBURY A. A.

The Fitton A. C football team of East Boston will open its home season Sunday afternoon at Wood Island Park, when they will line up against the strong West Roxbury A. A. team.

The Fittons scored an easy victory over the Winthrop Lewers and also a victory over the undefeated Abington Town team, considered one of the best semi-pro elevens in the State.

Manager O'Connell challenges any organized football team in New England and bars no team. He will endeavor to have strong attractions play in East Boston. A series with Charlie Brickley's New York Giants is being arraged.

This Day in History—October 22, 1921

THIS is the anniversary of the birth, in 1811, of Franz Liszt, the famous Hungarian composer and pianist. As a performer he has never been excelled. A friend of struggling genius, he was greatly beloved. He died in 1866.

Mine Accident Rates

THE accident rates in coal mines of England, France, Belgium, Germany, Austria and Japan are much lower than in America, because all the miners in one mine speak the same language.

Arthur Stringer's Studio Romance

A Stirring Narrative of the Influence of Love on the Lives of a Girl and a Man

By Arthur Stringer

Well Known Novelist and Author of Country-wide Reputation.

TORRIE for one brief moment, swept his face with a cool and quiet mask of dancing, though demaning of herself the real motive for those interrogations.

"I have seen him only twice," she said with a carefully maintained pal ence. "He says our stars are too much for him."

"And Vibbard?"

Torrie shook her head from side to side.

"No. I haven't seen him since"—She came to a stop and then, unwilling to recall a painful scene still too distasteful to her.

"And how about that man Fairman?" continued Forrow, quick on going to the end of his unsavory excursion. His wife's hesitation did not escape him, but he was to attribute to it a significance which could not, anguish for his own heart.

"Donnie's been here several times," she acknowledged the effort with which she spoke seeming to imply that she was forcing herself to be honest with an inquisitor whose right she could still question. "He's been here, just as he's been everywhere. But I don't think he'll bother me much more."

An Appeal

"No. I don't think he will," averred Storrow, with a passion which he was unable to control. For the past, which was equally beyond his control was rushing out its hands to strangle what was left of his hope.

"Owen," said Torrie, arresting him in his restless pacing back and forth. "Now that you've mentioned these men, there's something I want to say to you.

About them?" he promptly demanded

"Not so much about them as about myself, and what I would like to do some day when—when the last of this—is over. You still want to help me then, Owen?"

He stood gazing down at her, hugely touched by the tragic power to whom he knew the deep and humid eyes at the soft and yielding outline which so much of love without love—the red and pathetic mouth with the faint dawn of desire in their over-vivid curve that she was in some way unlawful to do eye that she stood beautiful and must only natural a joyful beautiful before God. Doesn't all this, when you think that if she were only if she were old and faded, she might remain entirely innocent? Actually, he own. Even before his day, he supposed, men had wished such things.

Yet he was not sure that don't so," she patiently repeated

He murmured, conscious of the sudden humility had taken the gift of words away from him.

Then with all the use of harping back on the past and making to-itself intolerable, and me miserable, too, should what's over and done with?" she asked, with her wide-eyed state of interrogation introduced, apparently, for the benefit of complex reactions which were washing him back and forth along the shores of memory.

A Hateful Past

"It's because we can't get rid of that past," he protested. "It's because those men still happen to be a factor in your life, a factor that is hateful to me?"

But those men are fond of me, Owen. They like to be with me. They take me for what I am. They don't stop to question every word and movement from me."

If they did, they wouldn't be there" was his embittered retort.

There was nothing so terrible about them being where they were" she relied with more spirit "I may have been foolish, in doing what I did. But there was no true wrong in it all—nothing really wrong. And until you are willing to believe that, I suppose, you'll have to keep on making yourself miserable"

"There was nothing wrong" he repeated, staring into her up-tilted face. He realized, as he looked down at her, the impossibility of more argument on a question so fundamental. It would be like trying to discuss the Athanasian Creed with an infant. It would be as foolish as trying to talk theology with a child.

"You believe me when I say that, don't you?" she was asking him And he tried to believe her, above everything else he felt the need of that belief. But afterthought, the darker sister of Desire, stood forever at his elbow holding him back

"Oh, what's the good of it all!" he cried out in his despair. "What's the good?"

"That's just what I've been asking you," protested Torrie, in a tone of modified triumph. "It's the future we've got to think about now."

"The future, with everything you've done and been piled high on its lap," he none too happily amended. And she sat with knitted brows, replexed by that accumulation of unrest which she could not quite comprehend

A Cruel Report

"I don't think you should blame me," she finally asserted, "for things which happened before you ever came into my life"

But I didn't think I was coming into that sort of life," he found the cruelty to retort

She sat staring at him abstractedly.

"Yet you probably remember how you came into it?" she reminded him

"Yes, I remember," he none too happily acknowledged

"Then, if you're so afraid of my past, and if you want to keep me for yourself, as you pretend to do, why can't you take me away from all this?"

He stopped short and turned about on her. It was something he had never thought about. It was something which, as he meditated upon it, opened wider and ever wider vistas of possibility. . .

"Oh, Owen," she continued, after a moment's silent study of his face, "let's get away somewhere where we can start all over again! Let's slip away somewhere where we can be by ourselves, just the two of us!"

He did not answer her, for he was thinking of the open, of roads winding ribbon-like through gray-green valleys mottled with purple shadows, of sun-bathed cliffs overlooking wide reaches of water dappled with foam, of bracken-covered islands where the partridge drummed and the call of the moose echoed out of lonely and pine-clad hinterlands.

"Isn't there any place we could go to?" she persisted, as though that thought of migration had brought a new purpose and hope to life But Storrow did not answer her. He was remembering how other men had lived down situations even darker than his, how under new skies came new aspirations and energies

Torrie watched him with a clouded face, more hurt than intimidated by his silence

"What would you have done," she quietly inquired, "if Donnie Eastman himself had taken me off that way? Would you have been glad or sorry?"

"Did Donnie intend to take you away?" demanded Storrow, arrested by some momentary flash of recklessness from Torrie's face.

"He at least wanted to. And since I'm going to be absolutely honest with you, I may as well tell you so."

"And just what was his plan for running away with another man's wife?" asked Storrow.

"I don't think it quite reached the planning stage. But he said the Nautilus, was a sea-going boat, that's the yacht he chartered a little over two years ago. He said we could go down to Havana, and then slide around into the Gulf, or even slip across to Europe by the southern route. He meant it He really wanted to. And I don't think the thought of migration had brought a new purpose and hope to life But Storrow did not answer her. He was remembering how other men had lived down situations even darker than his, how under new skies came new aspirations and energies

Can Storrow and Torrie Find Happiness Yet?

OWEN STORROW forces himself to come back to Torrie now that he knows she is to have a child. Torn with doubts about his wife's past, he still determines to do what he can to reclaim happiness for them both in the future. But back of all his plans lurks the demon of jealousy and misunderstanding. His marriage has led into a bog of disillusion, and in his heart he knows that danger lies ahead whichever way he turns. And what of Torrie? What will she do now? Will she be willing to play the game, and settle down into what seems to her a humdrum, domestic life, sacrificing her career for the man who distrusts her and all her friends?

worry over and let everything go smash just to get." She looked up with an almost childlike curiosity in her wide-set eyes. "And I've been wondering just what you'd have done if Donnie Eastman had carried me off."

"I'd have killed him," cried Storrow, with a vehemence which sounded startling even to his own ears.

"Then you do care, after all," was Torrie's almost exultant proclamation. "You do! You do! You must!"

He stared at her, unable to comprehend the perverse and phantasmal consolation which she was hugging to her breast.

"Would you be willing to go up to Canada?"

"I'd go anywhere, anywhere, with you," was her answer. And then she added, as though in afterthought: "But why to Canada?"

He told her of the old Amasa Kirkner fruit farm which had become his at the time of Augusta Kirkner's death. He described it as best he could, from the time-distorted memories of childhood.

It was not until he suddenly announced that he would have to have a talk with Charlotte Kirkner about the matter that any cloud crept into Torrie's new-found horizon of contentment

"What has she got to do with it?" was his wife's quick question, barbed with suspicion

"Everything, unfortunately," answered Storrow, remembering his extraordinary habit of materializing things during the past few months.

Three hours, in fact, after a talk over the long-distance wire had assured him that Charlotte was still at Swansea, he was stepping into the wine-colored roadster with which she met him at the trimplotted little Long Island station.

She said little on the way home but she made no effort to conceal the fact that she was glad to see him. She glanced at him searchingly when he explained that he had come to talk about the Amasa Kirkner farm.

His Own Property

"You mean the Owen Storrow farm," she quietly corrected. "You haven't you wakened up to the fact yet that it belongs as completely to you as—well, as this car does to me?"

Nor did it surprise him, when she reached home, to hear her declare that it was a crime to waste even an hour of such a perfect June day indoors.

"Let's tramp those hills again, Owen," she suggested, "and we can talk things over as we go."

So they started out across the open country, on foot, almost gaily, almost with a sense of truancy in their hearts. Yet it was only presumptuously and incidentally that they touched on the affairs of the Lake Erie farm, for their thoughts were elsewhere engaged. They skirted the parked grounds of a clubhouse and mounted high above the vivid green slopes of a golf links, where they could see flannel-clad figures moving anti-like across the lower emerald levels. It was not until they had reached a hilltop solitude with nothing but leafy whisperings about them that Storrow told her he was about to leave New York.

"For good?" she said, coming to a stop.

A ROMANCE OF ANOTHER GENERATION

By Ruth Logan.

AUNT Hattie had played an important part in the upbringing of Nellie. That Index Nellie had participated in the main of helping blood relations and in-laws rear their children since she had never for one moment lived in the golden glow that is cast about the heads of wives and sweethearts. No man had ever loved Aunt Hattie to her knowledge and certainly she had never permitted herself to fall in love

At the age of sixty-four Aunt Hattie believed firmly that it is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. Of course, her experience had been a negative rather than a positive one but she felt that Nellie's mother had been more blessed by love had the love of John Brookins, whose untimely passing had brought such anguish that even she could have been without him

What Loss Meant

"But, Hattie you can't understand what it means to lose some one you love," moaned Ella Brookins, teary in her faded brown eyes

"There, there, mother. Don't cry. Daddy was with us for years and years. Surely we have to be thankful that we had him so long You have memories and poor Aunt Hattie hasn't even those."

"That is the way of the world," moaned Ella. "A good man like John must go and leave such boundering Dan Winkler to live on and look as if he'd never suffer. He calls that girl of Masters his golden girl. Such rot! As if all the money in christendom could make her anything but tarnished silver or maybe brass"

"But Gloria is really a nice girl," insisted Nellie. "She met me yesterday on the street and asked me what I thought of the way Dan was getting on. Her father has made Dan the head of the factory Superintendent, I think she said"

What Aunt Hattie thought she kept to herself. Instead of making a reply she went to the door to get the morning mail

Nellie thrust a forefinger between the flap of a long envelope and uttered a little scream of delight. It's from Dan. He's coming home. He has something to ask be. Mother Aunt Hattie! He means it! 'My Golden Girl'"

"Let us hope so. I always supposed Things come right in this life if you wait long enough. Perhaps some day I, too, that my life, too, is not going to be so empty."

What Kelly Brookins did not have observed was cut short by the repeated ring of the doorbell. It was Mrs. Masters, all excitement smiled and her bed lips smiled merrily.

Dan is coming home," she said to Nellie. "Aren't you glad?

"Gloria! I always thought you were Dana girl"

"I know you did. And it was perfectly experience had been a negative rather than a positive one but she felt that Nellie's mother had been more blessed by love had the love of John Brookins, whose untimely passing had brought such anguish than ever she could have been without him

Seemed Years

"Dan asked me to marry him a while ago. I thought I would then, but dad persuaded me not to. Now I'm glad I didn't. I knew it was Nellie Dan loved all the time Dad said, Gloria. I can't do anything for Nellie, but we can give her happiness through Nellie.'

"That's what I wanted to tell you. It seems that years and years ago Dad loved you He had to get on in the world, and marrying mother helped him to do it. He said you were the real golden girl in his heart and always would be. It made me realize that some day Dan might turn back to a memory of Nellie."

"Your father! Loved me" gasped Aunt Hattie "But, then, I think I always knew it." The little lined face smiled radiantly "I knew if I waited a memory would come to make life sweeter They are the only things that can stay with us, Gloria."

Aunt Hattie bent down and kissed the trembling lips of Jerry Masters' daughter. Don't tell Ada," she whispered. "Ella doesn't believe in such things. And thank your father for me."

PROTECT THE LUNGS

By Brice Belden, M. D.

PROPER and sufficient clothing should be worn according to the daily weather, not according to the season of the year. Under the skin is an auxiliary lung to the lungs, its function must be encouraged by suitable clothing Improper and insufficient clothing which permits the cooling of the body, results in a resistance to pneumonia, which now causes more deaths than tuberculosis.

Exposure to extremes of cold and inclement weather invites infection by the pneumonia germs. To guard adequately against this disease, one must be protected by warm clothing. Public conveyances and public places should be properly ventilated. The germs of pneumonia cannot withstand fresh air and sunlight

Twenty-five per cent. of the deaths from pneumonia occur among infants under their first birthday. Another 25 per cent. of deaths from this disease occur between the ages of fifty and seventy. It will thus be seen that the extremes of life should be especially guarded against exposure to cold by adequate heating and ventilation in the home, since they are very susceptible to its influence

Pneumonia is a disease which attacks both rich and poor. Infection commonly occurs in large gatherings, in public places and in badly ventilated and improperly heated homes.

Frequent airing of bed linen and blankets is advisable, since but a nothing is an active medium for the transmission of infectious colds, from which, of course, pneumonia may ultimately result." This is particularly necessary in the case of lodging houses and hotels.

Resistance against pneumonia may be increased by avoiding excesses of all kinds, by securing eight hours of sleep each night, by avoiding undue fatigue from any cause, and by avoiding persons who cough and sneeze in a careless manner

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate Inc.

NEVER rush into a love affair. Love is a waiting game, which requires nerve, concentration and a poker face.

The one thing about love-making that the modern man simply can't understand is that in order to make it thrilling and interesting, he must really put a little love in it.

Before marriage, if a man gets sleepy and wants to go home before the first crowing of the milkman, a girl suspects that his love is growing cold; after marriage, if he sits around the house until 9:30 without yawning, she wonders if he is growing sentimental again

Hawaii has lost half its charm for men, now that the feminine costumes on Broadway and Main street have almost resolved themselves into a ruffle and a string of beads.

It is an impossible for a man to conceal his burning love from a woman before four flights as it is for him to conceal the smoke of his burning pipe from her after marriage.

A man never marries with any reason. He waits until he has lost his reason, his will power and his common sense, and then lets the girl make up what's left of his mind for him

A woman hater is a man who dislikes women because he knows that if he doesn't he will love them; and he doesn't want to love them, because he hates them—as the old lady said!

Funny thing, a woman! She counts her triumphs by the number of men she has refused to kiss; her charm by the number of women she has snubbed, and her morality by the number of joys she has renounced

Life is a keyboard whereon you play, and from which your fingers bring forth harmonies, melodies or discords, according to the song, the dirge or the jazz in your soul!

Best Recipe Contest

The Boston American is interested in securing the best recipes obtainable from its readers. Each week it offers a major prize of $25 (in the form of an order on your favorite grocer or provision dealer) and ten additional cash prizes of $1 each. Each recipe entered in the contest must be accompanied by the sales slip of a grocer or provision dealer whose advertisement you see in the Boston American, or his name and address if he does not give sales slips.

The $25 prize winner is announced on this page every Monday. The winners of the two $1 prizes are published each day.

Old-Fashioned Vegetable Soup

Three pounds stew meat covered with water and boiled two hours Add 2 onions, 3 carrots, 3 white turnips, 1 parsnip (above cut up for small pieces), 1 tablespoon salt, a little pepper, 2 or 3 bay leaves. Let cook another hour, and then add 6 or 7 small potatoes (whole) and boil another half-hour. Keep plenty of water on all the time. Then add dumplings made by mixing 1 quart of flour with 1 tablespoon lard, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder Mix like biscuit dough with milk or water, and drop into soup by spoonfuls. Take out a little broth so that dumplings will rest on vegetables while cooking, as they will be heavy if they get down in broth. Cover all and cook fifteen minutes. Take out; thicken soup with four tablespoons of flour mixed with water. Turn extra broth back into kettle and cook two or three minutes until thickened.

Coffee Cake

One and one-half cakes of yeast, 1 cup of milk scalded and cooled, 1 tablespoonful sugar, 3 eggs, 1 cup sugar and ½ cup butter creamed, 3 cups sifted flour, 1 cup each of citron, currants and raisins (or equal parts), ¼ teaspoon salt. Dissolve yeast and one tablespoonful of sugar in the lukewarm milk. Add 1½ cups of flour. Beat well. Cover and set aside in a warm place to rise one hour or until light. Add to this the butter and sugar creamed, the fruit which has been floured and balance of flour or enough to make a good cake batter; also salt and eggs well beaten. Beat for ten minutes. Pour into well buttered cake or bread tins, filling them about half full. Cover and let rise until pans are nearly full. Then bake in moderate oven. If made in two cakes, they should bake forty-five minutes. One cake should bake one hour.

THE NEWEST IN HATS

By Rita Stuyvesant—

THE Autumn millinery season is in full swing. Felt hats for sport and dressy wear are rivaled by clever millinery to accompany the smartly tailored suit or the ultra-smart hat for afternoon and evening functions.

The felt hats are dashing for sports wear. Soft pull-on models that adopt themselves raktishly to the fancy are offered in all the smart shades, such as pheasant, brown, henna, navy, gray, purple and black. Some models have a rolled brim and soft crushed crown, with cutout felt and ribbon trimming on the crown and brim

A larcer model comes in felt in the same smart shades, but is rolled at the back and bound with grosgrain ribbon. Ribbon band and bow smartly tailored at the front in the only trimming.

Velour and plush are shown in smart shapes and seem to be especially desirable in the rolling sailor effects. These, too, are simply banded with ribbon and do not require any other trimming, for they depend on their beauty of material and becoming lines to insure success.

Duvetyn is being turned into all sorts of smart hats. One, a chic little affair, has a mushroom shape, with soft section crown and big silk tassel at the side. This hat is shown in sand, brown, henna, navy, copen, gray and black, with tassel to match.

Velvet is used extensively and is made up into clever hats for dressy wear. One close-fitting turban, softly draped, has velvet wings effects on the sides and a jet pendant ornament dangling from the right side. This lovely hat comes in a number of shades, including rose and sand.

Hints for the Household

Salt dissolved in ammonia will remove grease spots.

Kid shoes can be kept soft and free from cracks by rubbing them once a week with glycerine or castor oil.

When making jam, add a tablespoonful of glycerine to the fruit. It will lessen the amount of sugar you will require.

Not to His Liking

A washerwoman applied to a man for work, and he gave her a note to the manager of a certain club. It read as follows:

STORY OF A YOUNG GIRL'S STRUGGLES

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

I AM awfully sorry," he went on "I should have asked you earlier in order to make sure that you would have the afternoon free. But I have had a couple of serious cases that might have needed me tomorrow. But now both are improving satisfactory—so I am quite sure I can get away. Can't I persuade you to think better of your decision?"

"Thank you," the girl said stiffly. "But I have a previous engagement for tomorrow afternoon—one made several days ago."

"And it can't be broken? Excuse me, but I mean is it so pleasant that you want to keep it? If not, couldn't it be broken?"

The hot blood rushed to Helen's face. How insistent this man was in spite of the deception he and Ishbel had practiced upon her! He must consider her a fool to be cajoled into doing that which she had refused to do. Her scorn made her throw prudence to the winds

No Desire to Break It

"I have no desire to break it," she said quickly. "It is with a friend." She paused. She must let Mr. Andrews know that the "friend" was a man. "Moreover," she added, little affair, has a mushroom shape, "I promised him to keep it. It means a great deal to him. I do not flatter myself that my acceptance of your invitation could bring you any pleasure."

"I do not quite understand what you mean," he said. "If do not want to force my presence upon you, but if I have displeased you I wish you would give me an opportunity to explain.

"It really is not necessary," was the brusque reply. "Good-bye"

Helen Gorman returned the receiver to its hook with a start that betrayed the state of her temper

All the morning, as she appeared outwardly intent upon her duties at Terriberry's, Helen was dwelling in thought upon the invitation she had received and declined

PIMPLES HEALED BY SIMPLE REMEDY

Recent Discovery of Treatment Which is Easily Used at Home Is Causing Pimples, Acne and Blackheads to Disappear Like Magic.

Any person can be quickly and easily healed of pimples and unsightly skin blemishes by taking advantage of the discovery of a famous Kansas City chemist

A simple external treatment for clearing the complexion, which may be used at home, is described in a new booklet which is now being sent free to readers of this paper. The booklet has been written by admittedly, one of the best chemists in the country.

This booklet shows how you can clear up your skin and keep it soft, smooth and heal blot at a trifling expense. Methods of treating acne, reducing large pores which sometimes blackheads also and shiny skin, are fully discussed. As the booklet is absolutely free to readers you should write for your copy before the offer is withdrawn. Just send your name and address to the MAROUT LABORATORIES 109 Clover Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and you will receive the book at once by return mail.

Under other circumstances—even a few days ago—it would have meant happiness to her. As she pondered on this her heart throbbed faster, then sank sickeningly.

For a moment, she recalled Andrews's tone when he bade her good-by on the last evening on which she had seen him.

She had been unreasonably happy for that minute before they parted. And, afterward, how much happier she had been from the belief that he was thinking of her.

Roses! The thought of them led naturally to that of the bouquet of the cousin who had brought to her room the blossoms he had rescued from Mrs. Gorman's waste-basket.

Vaguely Comforted

She felt vaguely comforted as she anticipated the conversation she would hold with him this afternoon on her return to her lodging house. It was a great thing to be able to lighten his burden a little even if she could not be happy herself

He was her cousin. Therefore it was her duty to be of assistance to him in any possible manner. Nothing could stop her

So intent was she on her project to aid her newly-found relative that she forgot to consider as much as usual the gossip to which her landlady had warned her. Mr. Andrews knew that the "friend" was a man. "Moreover," she added, little affair, has a mushroom shape, "I promised him to keep it. It means a great deal to him. I do not flatter myself that my acceptance of your invitation could bring you any pleasure."

"I do not quite understand what you mean," he said. "If do not want to force my presence upon you, but if I have displeased you I wish you would give me an opportunity to explain.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

The foreign trade financing corporation, I hear, is dead. The bankers refused to chip in enough to give it a start. Meanwhile the need for financing American exports constantly becomes greater. It's a pity that this banking proposition, which contained so much promise, has collapsed because of the short-sighted action of our bankers.

Henry P. Davison, admittedly the ablest partner ever associated with J. P. Morgan & Co., will be back in the ring around New Year. He is now able to be around, go motoring, and so forth. His palms have completely gone. Whenever he gets hold of a fellow banker or someone else familiar with what's going on, he fires a bombardment of questions.

A reception without precedent is likely to be accorded Mr. Davison when he returns to his desk. Not only is his tremendous ability recognized by everyone in the financial world, but Harry Davison is one of the most popular bankers New York has ever known.

His hand is badly needed at the financial helm these days, especially as he has an unusual knowledge and grasp of large international financial problems.

One of the very biggest financiers in America is totally unknown to the public.

And it was probably against his wishes that the news leaked out that George F. Baker was the donor of the new $1,500,000 Cornell University laboratory. So far as knowing Mr. Baker did not begin giving away large sums until quite late in life—he is now over eighty. One of the first men to induce him to "loosen up" was H. P. Davison, who at one time was a vice-president of Mr. Baker's First National Bank. When Mr. Davison took command of the American Red Cross and launched his $100,000,000 "drive," he tackled Mr. Baker for a substantial contribution. Mr. Baker gave him a million. I understand that he repeated his gift in the following year. Apparently Mr. Baker has derived a sense of satisfaction from giving away a part of his enormous fortune.

George F. Baker, Jr., who will succeed his father, is recognized as quite able, and although he also shuns the limelight, he is not in any sense a recluse. He demonstrated his democracy during the war by enlisting in the ranks instead of seeking some commission, and he mixes with his business status and his position as head of the famous New York Yacht Club.

An American just back from Europe says that the French people are intensely bitter not only against the Germans, but against the British and also the Americans. They feel, he states, that both Britain and America have adopted too friendly an attitude toward Germany and are thus threatening to cheat France of her fruits of victory.

The Germans, he further declares, return France's hatred with interest. They now regard the British as good sportsmen and as being actuated by a spirit of fair play. The ordinary people in Germany, he says, still feel sore at America for having entered the war at the very time Germany felt that victory was within her grasp.

Like most men familiar with finance, he declares unhesitatingly that Germany cannot possibly maintain the prescribed gold payments, and that unless Britain and America can induce France to modify her tactics, there must inevitably be a cataclysm in Germany. He is hopeful that this matter will be taken up, at least unofficially, at next month's conference in Washington.

I called up first one and then another and then another executive of a large independent steel company this week, but was told that not one of them was on hand. When I inquired as to where they had gone, the reply was: "They've all gone shooting."

Out-of-town financial and business men visiting New York often declare nowadays that about the only time you can count upon finding highly-placed New Yorkers at their desks and accessible is in the middle of the week. The explanation given is that week-ends start on Friday and last until Tuesday morning, and that Tuesdays are consumed in overtaking accumulated mail.

Why do certain financiers lie so barefacedly? When the Guaranty Trust Company directors emerged from a recent meeting, the financial reporters asked a very prominent international banker, a director, if anything of interest developed at the meeting. "Not a thing; nothing but routine business," was the reply he shot back without batting an eye. Within forty-eight hours he was officially announced that at that particular meeting President Sabin was made chairman and Chairman Potter made president of the institution.

Most financial reporters become cynical.

SMALL LOSSES FOR SEVERAL RAILS

Trading Active on the Early Advance, but Quiet During Second Hour Recessional

By W. H. ROSS
Financial Editor

The New York market was irregular as to price changes when the market closed. It had a strong start but reacted in the second hour and the movement was indecisive in late trading. Falls were off in most instances at the close, but their losses ruled small. Among those to drop a point or more were Great Northern preferred, Union Pacific and Northern Pacific. They were depressed by the reduction of grain rates ordered for the Western territory. Trading was of moderate volume for a Saturday. Strongest stocks at the close were Houston, Pullman, Haskell and Barker and Tobacco Products. They were up from 2 to 5 points. Foreign exchange was steady.

UP AT OPENING.

Prices ruled higher when trading began, most of the leaders making fractional gains on first transactions. Equipments and oils were especially active. Within a few minutes the steady advice of Haskell & Barker sent it up five points to a new high mark of the year. Mexican Petroleum continued and it rose three in the first hour, making a gain of more than ten in two days. Steels were irregular and quiet, the reduction of $7 a ton in its price for rails announced by the U. S. Steel Corporation had no market effect. The reduction is said to stimulate building. Railway shares were now affected much by the ruling by the Labor Board for another conference with executives and union chiefs.

MARKET REACTED.

In the second hour traders took profits and realization sales contributed to a reaction. Rails went to a lower level, although transactions in them were comparatively few, and steels were mixed in movement. The several specialties sold off, most of them retained strength. General Electric and American Woolen made a gain. Equipments were higher in early trading, but suffered slightly in the recessional. Sugars held firm. The strike outlook is so uncertain that market operators were not inclined to extend commitments far and were made more cautious by this being a week-end. The general opinion in financial circles seemed to be that a strike will be avoided. The money situation is said to be steadily improving. The reserve ratio gain by the Federal Reserve system imparted confidence that call money will be plentiful at a low rate.

INDEFINITE TREND TO STOCK IN BOSTON

The Boston market was irregular all the morning. At the close gains and losses about balanced. Among recent issues were Boston & Maine, Island Creek, American Sugar common and preferred, Utah Copper, Woolen common, International Cement, General Electric, Atlantic Gulf and Mexican Investments. Rails were down one to three points. Weak issues included Calumet & Hecla, Arcadian and Carson Hill. Each declined a point. Coppers were dull and most of them showed small losses, including Copper Range ⅝, Calumet & Arizona ¾, Osceola ¼, New Cornelia ¾, Davis Daly and North Butte ⅝.

The Curb market was strong and active. Gains at the close ranged as follows: Gains at 40 cents; Bagdad, 4 cents at 25 cents; Boston & Montana, 1 cent at 89 cents; Boston Corporation, 2 cents at 60 cents; Crystal, 4 cents at 12 cents; Eureka, 4 cents at 40 cents; Ruby, 3 cents at 24 cents; Verde Minoo, 2 cents at 23 cents, and United Verde Extension, 5 cents at $2.7 cents. Among declines were First National, off 50 cents at 75 cents; Mutual, 3 cents at 54 cents, and Daddy ¼ cent at 5½ cents.

German Exports Increase

Although hampered by depreciated currency, and by high exchange and lack of raw materials, Germany is increasing its export trade. For June exports totaled 1,058,292 tons against 1,149,196 for May. Its imports totaled 1,227,578, a gain of 678,382 tons. Farm and factory products constituted 71 per cent. of June imports.

Boston Financial Notes

President Allen told stockholders that the cost of the Boston & Montana mill to Reverberatory smelter was $1,500,000 and that since 1916, $4,347,782 had been expended on construction work. Of this amount $1,000,000 was spent for improvements this year from January 1 to November 1 the company will spend $1,000,000 more. Practically all mill machinery is installed and ready to start. The company has 2,000,000 tons of reproduce sufficient ore to keep the mill busy.

The Massachusetts commissioner of corporations has been asked by the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. to approve the issue of 100,000 shares of no par value. The increase results of 100,000 shares of no par value.

La Rose shipments from the Cobalt region during the week ended October 15 totaled 300,000 pounds.

Eastern Steamship stockholders ratified the sale of the company to a special meeting in Fitzel, Me.

The department of public utilities has granted authority to the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. to issue 5,000 shares of preferred stock and additional capital stock at $130 per share.

Articles of association of the following corporations have been filed by the Boston Trust Company: Bay State Realty Co., $10,000; Boston Sea Scout Society of Sacred Heart, Inc., $100,000.

Railroad Items

In the four months from April 1 to August 31 the Pennsylvania Railroad stockholders increased in number from 142,000 to 150,000.

For the first two months of the year the Georgia, Southern & Florida failed to earn its fixed charges by $1,000.

The September gross of Hudson & Manhattan increased $17,000 over September, 1920, and the net increased 27 per cent. Income account for the nine months ended September 30 showed a deficit of $1,000.

Western Pacific for September earned $254 in the second October week.

Gross earnings of Railway increased $700 in the second week of this month, while that of the Rutland & Ohio fell off $54,581.

EVANS PREDICTS RETURN OF OLD COMBINATION

Stranger in Ranks of Corporate Interests Seems to Be Coming Back, He Says

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 22.—A spirit which has been a stranger in the ranks of corporation interests for years seems to be coming back in a timid way and we may have before long a recrudescence of the old idea of combination, which in the past has made so much trouble and done so much good.

The notable thing now is the Haskell & Barker Car Company, the stock of which has had a considerable rise in the past few days. There is a basis for the reports of something important to happen to that concern, but for the moment a restatement of the various stories is sufficient.

The most pointed so far as Chicago information is concerned is that the Pullman Company is to take it over at a valuation of $78 per share. Also that a merger of the American Car Foundry Company and American Steel Foundries with the operation.

At this hour persons who know the facts, or some of them, refuse to give definite information.

It is a tribute to Edward F. Carry, president of the Haskell & Barker, that seekers after the property consider him the greatest asset although others like it is said to have been acquired at $55 per share on its stock entirely outside of its plants.

ONE OTHER DEAL.

There is one other possible deal which is too far out on the edge of the negotiations to be mentioned. The rise in General Electric is significant rather of a strong financial condition than of any large deal in the offing future.

In the strictly local field the rehabilitation of the Middle West Utilities Company—which indeed did not need much rehabilitation—is happening. In the course of events and its issues appear to be bound for higher prices though not likely to move rapidly.

Also one may mention Mitchell Motors, controlled in Chicago and Racine, Wisconsin, as having achieved a quotation of 19 per share basis, as against a low $3 this year. The explanation is found in part in the announcement of a new motor said to be highly efficient.

There is a basis for these things and a stimulation to wealthy and enterprising men in the probability that the higher percentages of the reduction enforced against large incomes will appeal to small incomes and are likely to be reduced in the legislation of this year.

GAIN AN EARNINGS.

But back of that is an unquestioned gain in business generally. J. V. Farwell reports a good trade and Marshall Field & Company have been declaring an improvement for two or three weeks.

These two houses stand for the big business in dry goods and related articles. The leaders in meat trade, Armour & Company are doing better than the normal pre-war record and the same appears to be true of Swift & Company. It is understood, however, that their South American trade is considerably restricted.

It is all a gradual if not a sensational change. Spirit there has been none until recently in the trade of the country since 1913. Crops there have been a-plenty through the war period and since the armistice. Health is coming slowly indeed, for on the one side are the farmers who are able to buy little on the other side on account of the conditions in Europe.

The effect on bank exchanges in the city is evidenced by clearings the past week 25 per cent. less than in the corresponding period of last year.

MONEY BEHIND CHANGE.

The rental value of money has a good deal to do with the change that has taken place. It now looks as if there will be a steadying process which will go low enough to encourage promotion but not so low as to mark extreme dullness in banks or holding the public announcement. It is now in the city of Florence is to receive funds.

PRESIDENT Bryan of the St. Paul said that the work or electrification west of Harlowtown, Mont., has been abandoned for the present. "We are having too much trouble showing any money return to justify us in trying to continue this work. Our general traffic is showing some improvement, however, and we hope to proceed to make the streets and boulevards safer for both driver and pedestrian?

Don't try to make a masterpiece of it. Don't imitate. Be yourself! It is the idea we are after and not a composition. Your penmanship may not be what you would like, your style may not recall Addison or Washington Irving, and yet your suggestion in the Movie Play Title Text and Songs of the World Title Text may be acceptable. But this time, he says, without a "sticker." Here is his statement:

"I propose to deliver sixty pictures without a catch or a "sticker" among them. Sixty pictures about which there can never be a word of debate. This is going to be my finest effort. Wait!

We'll wait.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Professional operations dominated Friday's stock market, and while the general tone was somewhat irregular the exploitation of the short interest in a few of the specialties furnished plenty of excitement and interest for the commission house onlookers. Mexican Petroleum which was heavily sold earlier in the week was forced upward more than seven points, the shorts in Pullman were given another squeeze and new high levels were established in some of the specialties, among them being Haskell & Barker, Car Co., Dept. Stores, American Ice, Corn Products and Jones Tea.

THE strength displayed by the market in the early trading came as something of a surprise in view of the rather unfavorable complexion of the news on the railroad strike. The technical market position in some of the specialties proved to be sufficient to offset the unfavorable character of the general news and the period of running in the shorts was taken in hand early in the session.

THE tendency of the oils was still toward higher levels, some of the recent leaders were not so active as they have been. There were plenty of buyers to take the place of Sweeney, and Houston Oil, Mexican Petroleum and the Standard Oil issues came in for their part. Among the industrial specialties, General Electric, American Woolen and Wells Fargo Express were strong. The steels were steadier, but not active.

CONSIDERABLE interest was taken in the renewed activity in the stock of the Federal Reserve System, which showed a gain of nearly two points in the week, the high mark of 76.8. The New York bank made a rise in ratio of six points to the basis of 83 largely as a result of the gain in its share of the gold settlement fund.

The general impression is that more and more of a disposition to ignore the strike as a market factor.

PROFESSIONAL operations were responsible for the more than violent fluctuations which occurred in the industrial group today. This was particularly true in the case of Mexican Petroleum. Houston Oil was another strong feature of the oil group, which was also dominated by the same factors which were responsible for the advance in Mexican Petroleum. This stock has always been controlled by a powerful speculative clique and there has been a latent short interest outstanding which was run to cover.

THE advance in Haskell & Barker, on the renewed activity in the stock of last December, is reported to have been taken as a cue to the unusual advance in the last few days. Accompanying the rise was a rumor that the company had been taken over by the American Car & Foundry Company, an idea not endorsed by officials.

HEAVINESS in the railroad group was not surprising to traders in view of the unsatisfactory development of the railroad strike. The trading element derived considerable consolation from the fact with which other stocks were advanced in spite of the strike possibility. Buying of shares of this stock by traders and Canadian Pacific was reported as of excellent quality.

SHARP advance in General Electric was attributed by belated covering by shorts. Many professionals went short of this stock yesterday on the around 115, and all of these commitments had not been covered. There was no new development to account for the advance.

THERE was some semi-official de-tails that the $100,000,000 loan to Mexico has been arranged and that there is excellent authority for believing that the firm move for a few unimportant details.

IT is understood that a loan of $10,-000,000 to one of the Italian cities has been arranged and that only the formal signing of the papers is holding the public announcement. It is reported that the city of Florence is to receive funds.

PRESIDENT Bryan of the St. Paul said that the work or electrification west of Harlowtown, Mont., has been abandoned for the present. "We are having too much trouble showing any money return to justify us in trying to continue this work. Judge Gary Says Production Cost Does Not Justify the Reduction

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 22.—The United States Steel Corporation today announced a reduction in the price of its standard rails of $7 a ton.

In a statement issued by Judge Gary, chairman of the board of directors, it was announced that although the present costs of production do not justify this step, it was hoped that the reduction, together with expected reductions in freight rates and otherwise, together with larger operations, will have a beneficial effect upon our costs."

The present price of rails is $47 a ton.

PAVLOWA WILL GIVE THREE SHOWS HERE

Great Russian Dancer to Appear at Symphony all Next Tuesday

Supported by what is probably the largest and finest company with which she has ever travelled, Anna Pavlowa, the great Russian dancer, will make three appearances in Symphony Hall, Boston, next Tuesday evening, Oct. 23, at 8.15, and Wednesday afternoon and evening, Oct. 26, at 2.30 and 8.15 respectively. The principal new dancers of her Ballet Russe are Laurent Novikoff, her new dancing partner who travelled with her in 1915, succeeding Mordkin, her first partner. His is considered by many the finest dancer with which she has ever been paired. Victorina Krieher, the new premiere danseuse, although a girl of 16, has already had a brilliant career in the capitals of Russia and Europe at large. The program for Miss Pavlowa's Boston appearance, following Tuesday Night; The Ballet, "Coppelia" by Delibes; new ballet entry Tuesday, arranged by Clustine to the music of Tschaikowsky, and the following divertisis: "Oriental" by Levi and Sadowski, "Valse triste" by Sibelius, "Spanish dances" by Albeniz, "Scena Ossesaise" by Boccherini, "Arlitra's dance" by Grieg, "Greek dance" by Brahms, and "Bacchanale" by Glasounoff.

For the Wednesday matinee: The Ballet, "Coppelia" by Delibes; "Papillon" by Helmund, "Dragonfly" by Kreisler, "Hungarian dance" by Brahms, "Holland dance" by Grieg, "Pirate's dance" by Dvorak, "Visions" by Berlioz, and "Gypsie Petite Pavlowa" by Luckes.

For Wednesday evening: Ballet, "Chopiniana," orchestrated by Glasounoff; the ballet "Amarilla," music by Glazounoff and Driga; and the following divertisements: "Rapsodie" by Liszt, "Moment Musical" by Schubert, "The Swan" by Saint-Saens, "Itsiacate" by Drigo, "Hindu dance" by Saint-Saens, and "Russian dance" by Tschaikow-Rubinstein.

NEW HOME FOR PEOPLE'S ORCHESTRA

The People's Symphony Orchestra has on-grown Convention Hall and the Sur day afternoon Symphony concerts will be given at the Arlington Theatre at popular prices. The Boston Society of Singers has offered the theatre to the orchestra in the interests of good music.

The opening concert will be held tomorrow afternoon under the baton of Emil Mollenhauer. The program includes Tschaikowsky's Pathetic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" Overture, Tschaikowsky, Ippolitow-Iwanow's "March of the Sardar" Wagner's Prelude to Lohengrin.

The opportunity to hear an orchestra of seventy pieces for very low prices is of satimable advantage to music of small means, and the earnestness of these union musicians in working on Sundays at such programs should receive a week's work is ever cannot be too much commended.

OPERA SINGER LOVES TO TEASE

Emma Ainslee, who will sing Aspena in "Tovarich" next Monday was described by Jules Daiber, Mary Garden's manager, as one of the best equipped singers on the concert stage. She is a remarkable musician, a fine artist and a fine singing teacher who is very successful.

In oratorio she has sung under such conductors as Emil Mollenhauer and Nelson P. Coffin. In talking with a reporter she declared that her favorite reading was psychology and mental science.

"I have not much time to read, so I must read carefully," she explained. "Psychology is brain food. I like it. I also love to teach singing. I have an working regularly in opera I continue to give lessons to my pupils. I have one hobby, my little Yorkshire terrier. She was the most intelligent and adorable thing." Miss Ainslee sighed.

"She died a few weeks before I came to Boston. I was heartbroken and have never wanted to replace her."

LASHANSKA

On Sunday afternoon, October 30, at 3:30, in Symphony Hall, Hulda Lashanska, the young lyric soprano famous by her concerts in New York and other cities, and by her appearance with the Boston Symphony orchestra and the other large orchestras of this country, will sing for the first time in Boston in a program of her own. The numbers follow: "Spiegge Amate" by Gluck; "She's Fairer Than the Fair," by Cowen; "Lungi fel caro bene," by Secchi; "Summi Dei," by Handel; "Dedicate," by Schubert; "Haidenreslein" and "Madchen's Klage," by Schubert; "Er ist," by Schumann-Heink and Henri by Liszt; "Premiere Rencontre," by Grieg; "Un Reve," by Grieg; "Serenade," by Tschaikowsky; "Im Frahling" and "Indian Serenade," by Josten; "The Steppe," by Gretchaninoff; "Thy Beaming Eyes," by MacDowell; "Songs My Mother Taught Me," by Dvorak, and "I Heard a Cry," by Fisher. Mr. Warner Josten will be the accompanist.

AMY NEILL

Amy Neill, violinist, while a stranger to Boston, comes with a record of reputation far more extensive than the various Symphony orchestras of the country and in concert appearances both in this country and abroad have all produced the same result; a unanimous of opinion that her playing was that of the mature artist; a violinist with a tone of a sentiment; a violinist of a different stripe, technically proficient, and with qualities that display inherent musicianship.

Miss Neill was the winner of the Charles G. Dawes prize, carrying the trophy away from nearly two score other contestants, among whom were some of the best violinists of the country.

Her program for her Boston recital in Jordan Hall on Tuesday evening, October 25th, includes the Tartini Sanctt in G minor, the Fagnini concerto in D major and two groups of lighter numbers.

TWO ENTERTAINERS WHO ARE BILLED NEXT WEEK

15 OPERAS WILL BE GIVEN IN TWO WEEKS

San Carlo Repertoire at the Boston Opera House is Extensive

The success of the San Carlo Grand Opera subscription season of two weeks at the Boston Opera House, which commences on Monday, November 7, is assured both from a financial as well as a social viewpoint.

Much favorable comment has been made to Fortune Gallo, the general director of the San Carlo Grand Opera, on the repertoire and casts for the opening weeks, which already have been announced. The repertoire for the second week, the casts for which will be announced later, is as follows:

Monday, November 14—"Tosca."

Tuesday, November 15—"La Traviata."

Wednesday matinee, November 16—"Hansel and Gretel."

Wednesday matinee, November 16—"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

Thursday, November 17—"Madame Butterfly."

Friday, November 18—"La Gioconda."

Saturday matinee, November 19—"Lohengrin."

Saturday evening, November 19—"Otello."

This means that of the sixteen performances presented by the San Carlo Grand Opera in Boston the repertoire includes fifteen different operas, the only repeat being Madame Butterfly," which will be given at one matinee and one evening performance. It also gives every guest artist, including Anna Fitziu, Marie Sundelius, Esther Ferrabini and Henri Scott an appearance in an opera in which they are enabled to do their best work.

FOURTH SYMPHONY PROGRAM

For the fourth pair of Boston Symphony concerts to be given in Symphony Hall next Friday, October 28, at 2:30, and Saturday afternoon, October 29th, Pierre Monteaux will present the following program: The Suite in D major, No. 4, By Bach. Schubert's incidental music to the play, "Rosamunde." Berlioz's Overture, "The Roman Carnival," and Theophile Ysaye's First Symphony in G major. This work by the distinguished brother of the violinist will on this occasion have its first performance in Boston.

IDA GEER WELLER

Ida Geer Weller, whose recital occurs at Jordan Hall on Thursday afternoon, October 27, possesses the happy faculty of knowing how to build a program of interesting songs. She thinks for the public and her songs are chosen accordingly.

In her Boston recital program she opens with the traditional classical group of compositions by Beethoven, Haydn, Bach and Handel. She sings an aria by Bemberg, a group of "Gypsy Songs" by Dvorak, a group of French songs and a group in English. Coenrad V. Bos, the eminent Dutch pianist, will accompany.

RAIL LABOR LOST GREAT CHANCE, HAPGOOD SAYS

Union Chiefs Ignored Opportunity to Put Balky Roads in Wrong, Writer Declares

BY NORMAN HAPGOOD.

(Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.)

Washington, Oct. 22. The railroad employes lost a great opportunity in the present troubles. The labor forces usually do lose opportunities. If the capitalists are weak in wisdom and long-distance foresight, the union leaders are weak in tactics.

They have gotten themselves into such a predicament now, in threatening the governmental machinery and the public peace, that they are eager to get out of the mess. Yet a little while ago they had a full opportunity to gain a victory that would greatly increased their prestige and put their opponents in a hole.

All they needed to do was to say to the Pennsylvania and the Erie:

"You are wrong. We will obey the orders issued by the properly constituted governmental authority. We will strike against you unless you do accept the findings of the board. If the government will not or cannot enforce its recommendations, we will enforce them by economic pressure."

WOULD HAVE MADE POINT.

It is obvious that with that one step they would have put the railroads in the wrong and would have put themselves in a particularly strong position. The price they would have had to pay was obedience on their part also, but that price they will have to pay anyway.

If they strike they will lose. The increased use of the automobile will make it easier to deliver food, and the public will be almost solid against the striking forces that put out without indicating a willingness on their part to submit to governmental findings.

In Congressional circles it is thought that there will be a compromise involving the railroad funding plan. If the roads obey the new board, if in addition it is agreed that agricultural rates are to be down immediately, then Congress will surely pass the bill making the railroads what amounts to a loan of half a billion dollars.

EACH SIDE CAN BOAST.

If this happens—if both sides submit to the wages board, if agricultural freight rates go down, and if the half billion loan is granted then each side will be able to boast that it came out creditably from the acrimonage.

I spoke Friday of the disastrous effect on present transportation of the long and expert bill policies under which the railroad managers built up this country. A striking illustration of their lack of foresight may be given now.

James J. Hill was a great railroad man. When he decided to scrap the light engines and cars of his time he was right for his particular road. But he was immediately imitated by other managers all over the country without any study of conditions.

These heavier engines, heavier cars, longer rails, broader and rigid beds, new bridges, more expensive equipment of every kind. This heavier expense was brought about with no study of future tendencies and stands as a constant element of cost today.

Now, the light motor truck comes along and takes away a profitable branch of trade from the railroads. It is customary to estimate that the motor can economically successfully against the railroad to a distance of fifty miles.

TRUCK CAN COMPETE.

But an expert investigation had just been made in Chicago, resulting in the calculation that as rates are now the motor truck can compete to a distance of 125 miles.

When the country was being built up, and costs were low, the only problem was to get enough traffic, and the traffic increased great melons were cut, and the managers continued to think in terms of increased traffic. They never realized that the increase in traffic might be the thing that would break them down.

Increased costs, water competition and motor competition have caught these men without a plan. Their whole idea has broken down, unless they can do an entirely new kind of thinking, traffic by rail will play a rapidly lessening part in transportation. It will go down as water is revived and as gasoline expands.

STATE IS RUNNING SCHOOL FOR ORATORS

One can learn to be an orator with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as a teacher. Courses under the direction of the University Extension of the State Department of Education have been opened at the Normal Ar' School. The opening night found a big class present. The next meeting will be next Friday evening. Application may be made through the office of the division at oom 307, State House.

SUNDAY TO BE FINAL DAY FOR OUTINGS

Fine automobile riding weather tomorrow, says the weather forecast today. The cold spell, with freezing temperatures at Greenville, Me., and Northfield, Vt., is due to break and to be followed by warmer weather. In Boston early today the temperature dropped to 41, but began climbing again at once, and is expected to register between 60 and 65 tomorrow.

Hear Two on Erin

Members of the Ethan Allen Council, A. A. R. I. R., were entertained at their meeting in Robertson Hall, Bloomfield Building. Addresses bearing on the Irish question were delivered by Thomas N. Nolan, State secretary, and John J. Regan of New Bedford, member of the State directorate.

Mr. Pelletier Writes to The Boston American

We have received the following letter from District Attorney Pelletier, which explains itself:

To the Editor, Boston American,
80 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

I have read the editorial in the American of October 20th under the headline "PELLETIER'S CITY CLUB SPEECH," and hasten to protest against the unfair spirit and innuendo which pervades it.

I did not say that I had given special favors to any one; quite the contrary, the burden of my speech was to show that while I might be criticised for doing certain things when certain lawyers appeared, I had done the same or similar things in cases where the "elect" were counsel. My argument was plainly stated: that what I had done was because of the merits of the particular case, because it seemed to me the proper thing to do, but I objected to being charged with only those cases when one man or set of men were counsel with no mention of the case when the select few had appeared as counsel.

I challenge inspection of the eighty odd thousand cases handled in my twelve years of service to show that I have shown favoritism or "special favor." Every case has been disposed of on its merits regardless of the lawyer, and I believe I have done more for poor men and women without any lawyer than for those with counsel.

If the American is committed to support the Good Government Association, I presume that I ought to understand the motive of the editorial of last night. If it means to be truly American and fair, I ask that this letter be given publication of equal importance with the editorial.

As I said in my speech, which your editorial absolutely ignores; "I have always used my best judgment with an eye single always and only to the welfare of the community and the improvement of the accused."

Very truly yours,
(Signed) J. C. PELLETIER.

A careful re-reading of the editorial of which Mr. Pelletier complains seems to justify somewhat Mr. Pelletier's complaint. But the American did not mean to insinuate that Mr. Pelletier had granted to the class of lawyers and clients who are now proposing his removal from office any improper favors. All this newspaper intended to say was that Mr. Pelletier ought to keep on revealing the character of the favors asked by and granted to the class of lawyers and clients whom he charges are persecuting him, even though, as he examines the 80,000 cases which he has settled, he discovers favors which on retrospection he believes were improperly granted.

It is inconceivable that Mr. Pelletier's judgment today will agree with his past judgment concerning every one of those cases which he settled in the past. Circumstances vary and conditions under which judgment is exercised vary greatly. Lawyers are trained to be persuasive, and their clients' tears in one's immediate presence are much more potent to upset the judgment than tears in the memory.

The Boston American has always been a friend of Mr. Pelletier's and wants to continue to be a friend so long as he will permit it. Therefore, we overlook his little slur concerning the Good Government. He knows that the Boston American does not support the Good Government except when the Good Government happens to agree with the Boston American.

Honorable John R. Murphy is not a candidate of the Good Government. He did not seek the Good Government. The Good Government sought him. The Boston American does not govern its policies by mere negations. We are not against a man because somebody else or some other organization is for him, nor are we for a man because somebody else or some other organization is against him. Those who conduct their affairs that way get nowhere and do no good to anybody, and least of all to themselves.

State Has Cause to Be Proud

Mentally Afflicted War Veterans Get Best of Treatment Here, According to Legion Committee

A committee of the American Legion for the district of Massachusetts, composed of Department Commander James T. Duane, State Adjutant Leo A. Spillane, John F. Holland and John J. Walsh, all of whom have been conspicuously active in the effort to secure proper treatment of injured soldiers, has investigated the State hospitals, where shell-shocked and soldiers who have suffered other mental impairments have been received. They made a most careful investigation, talking with every soldier who was capable of discussing the question.

They make this report in part:

As a result of the inspection we are satisfied that our mentally afflicted comrades in this State are being cared for properly, adequately and kindly and with the greatest possible solicitude for their general welfare. The experienced and careful treatment they are receiving is probably equal to, if not greater than that accorded to any other class of disabled and sick World War veterans in this country.

This report is very satisfying to our pride in our State institutions, our State physicians and the employes of our State hospitals.

All honor to them.

Help the Italian Children

Who, being able, will help the Italian people of this community to raise money for the purpose of enlarging the home for Italian children? The home was founded last year at Centre street, Jamaica Plain. The demand for its aid has been beyond its capacity from the very beginning. Hundreds of applications have been refused because the home was not large enough to take the poor little children that needed a home there.

The Italian people throughout the State have responded generously to the appeal for aid in the enlarging of this home, but aid ought not to be confined to the Italians alone. Everybody who can spare a dollar would double it in satisfaction of helping to aid this worthy project.

Doubts Women's Intuition

By HERBERT W. SEAMAN

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The authorities, from Elinor Glyn to Hugo Munsterberg, agree that the intuition of woman is a wonderful thing; and it has become a bragging matter among them all that women lack the gift of reason that distinguishes man. Thus they have made a virtue of a shortcoming.

Nevertheless, the notion has as little foundation in truth as the notion that pigs can see wind.

You may once in a lifetime find a woman who admits that she has no sense of humor, but you will never goad her to the supreme humiliation of admitting that she lacks intuition. Men who fearlessly contradict their hostesses at dinner have been known to shrink from this final challenge.

Before reaching these conclusions I spent many years in earnest research. I have observed women at Monte Carlo, Epsom, Havre de Grace, Havana, Dorval Longchamps, Buenos Aires, various European kursaals, and in dozens of brokers' offices. Before my conversion, I have even lent them money.

Stars and Stripes

It's entirely true that in a battle of tongues a woman can hold her own—but she never does.

It's getting so these days that a woman can scarcely conceal her feelings!

* * *

"Recognize an old flame?"

"Worse than that; she recognized my wife!"

A girl who wants to reach a man's heart through his stomach might try being coquettish.

CLEAR THOUGHT, STRONG WILL AND HARD WORK

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

MUCH stuff and nonsense assails our eyes and ears these days, which suggests the possibility of our becoming anything we please.

On the other hand, hardly enough can really be said to make us aware of our latent possibilities and our unused powers.

Much and inspiring truth and much menacing mischief are involved in this high summons.

This call to creative self-respect and to active ambition is sounded not only by religious teachers, but by all kinds of publicists, who, in our times, supplement the aspirational appeal of the spiritual leaders.

Naturally, we are all flattered by these theses, which appear to be based upon such deep respect for our common human stuff.

It spreads a roseate beauty over all your dull-grey landscape to be assured that you can become whatever you want to become; that you can glow with health, increase your income, and be a great artist, or a master mechanic, or a potent executive, 'n everything!

Growing

Hence the growing vogue of Christian Science and New Thought and Applied Psychology and Correspondence Schools and House Organs and Optimistic Advertising—and other short cuts to well-being, achieving, winning and attaining.

And yet—though all of these stimuli carry their quota of intrinsic good, no substitute has ever been found for Clear Thought, Strong Will and Hard Work.

These still are the practical trinity, effective for all significant doing, being and becoming. These will help you to become what you can become—if not exactly whatever you want to become.

There's a reason for all this new-fangled optimism about our human nature.

To be sure, the religions have long preached something of the sort about us, telling us that we were all children of God, and, therefore, infinitely capable!

But they haven't meant it. That is to say, the preachers haven't meant it. For, whatever the religions themselves may theoretically assert, it is the function of the teachers of religion to maintain and dignify and justify and glorify the existing order.

All the ages before ours were aristocratic or oligarchic. Only the relatively few counted—the monarch and his minions and his dames! It was enough for the teachers of religion to make at least the "next life" attractive to the rest of us.

We All Count

But now—WE ALL COUNT! Therefore, the preachers now vie with all the other apostles of democracy to dignify and glorify the mass of us.

Fairly suddenly, it has been discovered that we are all wonderful, that we are all marvelous creatures, indeed Gods in the germ!

And the greatest miracle is: That, this time, they believe it!

For democracy has burst upon us with all the dazzling splendor and all the awful impressiveness of a new planet swimming into our ken.

Our greatest souls are only a promissory note of what the much greater souls of the future will be. Meanwhile, they prophesy most confidently what the average of us may be—if we choose!

It is well that we see ourselves with double vision, as it were; telescopically, to recognize the distant possibilities of this star-dust known as Man, and microscopically, to realize the infinite effort required for our integration into meaning and beauty.

If you are capable of seeing yourself thus alternately in the rosy light of ideality and in the white light of reality, then you may safely listen to the optimistic flattery of the apostles of democracy.

Even then, you would better heed what Bernard Shaw has the serpent say to Eve, in his latest book, "Back to Methuselah."

"Imagination is the beginning of creation. You imagine what you desire; you will what you imagine, and at last you create what you will."

Soldiers' Home in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 22.—Mexico has opened an Old Soldiers' Home for the veterans of the War of '47, when the United States army entered Mexico, and the War of '62, when the struggle began to drive Emperor Maximilian from the country. There are only fifty-five of these old soldiers and some are close to 100 years old.

Establishing of the home was the idea of President Obregon, who saw that money was set aside for the purchase of two houses, with ample grounds, in one of the suburbs of the capital. It was not an expensive undertaking, as the entire cost, apart from maintenance, was about $57,000.

It will be unlike the soldiers' homes in the United States, as the veterans will take their families with them when they enter the retreat to spend what remains of life.

Before the home was opened, the veterans drew small pensions. These were not large enough to give them all the comforts which old age needs. These comforts will be supplied in the home.

AMUSEMENT

If you cannot enjoy a certain line of amusement that others participate in, why make yourself unhappy and refuse to interest yourself in something you cannot do.

If you cannot play golf, you can pitch quoits, a game which can be made mighty interesting.

Horses of persons old enough to know better are sour and disgruntled because they cannot follow the sort of pleasure they want.

Life is too short to spend any part of it mourning over things which cannot be helped or avoided.

Men who play golf get tired of it, if they play a great deal.

Not all golf players get all there is of full enjoyment out of it.

Nearly all golf players become obsessed with the idea of becoming proficient, and it is long before such a result is won.

Often the man who amuses himself pitching quoits gets more real fun out of the game, and has less to make him disgusted with himself.

PRETENSE OF BEING WHAT ONE IS NOT

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

WELL, WELL!—what a book!

I've just finished it.

I wish I had just opened it to begin to read it.

I didn't like it at first—it seemed a feeble, footless sort of a thing. Oh, yes, it's true to life—as true as truth, and a whole lot truer than mere fact ever dared try to pretend to be.

The little bustling, prosperous, self-important city—overgrown village, really—but it called itself a city.

The Smug Aristocracy

The smug aristocracy of the place—the climber—the toughs and the poor, little, pitiful, wistful, silly, deceitful heroine, and her poor, miserable, dumb driven father, who couldn't hold his own against the mad ambition of his hen-pecked fool of a wife.

How sorry you do feel for them both. And the wife—I'd like to push her right off a barge into a deep, wide, dark river somewhere and turn my back and never watch to see whether she could swim a stroke or not.

Savage? Yes, she does make me savage—a woman like that, and I'm afraid they're a good many of them in the world. Ignorant, narrow, bitter, filled with a kind of gnawing envy that they call, poor souls, "ambition."

She wasn't satisfied with her plain, little old house and her good, old plodding husband and her pretty, silly little climber of a daughter.

She wanted Daughter to get into the swim—and on she lied and schemed and pretended and taught Daughter to lie and scheme and pretend. And they made up excuses for not keeping a maid.

And they minced and fluttered and pressed and pruned through life like a pair of silly peacocks—and all the time they prodded Father and poked him and nagged him and begged him and accused him and cried to him and sulked at him to make him betray his employer and go out somewhere and "make good," so that they could have more clothes and a bigger house and give parties and make themselves believe that they "belonged."

And poor father broke down under the strain of it and had a stroke—and even then, they didn't have pity on him. And at last they drove him to perfidy and deceit and to ruin.

And the girl—she angled for one man and caught another. And then when the other one broke all her silly little pretense and affectation—something like a gleam of honesty came to her and she gave up the game, once for all. She gave up the play acting and the posing and the bragging and the pretending—and put on a simple dress and went to business school to learn how to be a good stenographer. And for the first time since I took up the hook, I liked her and wished her well.

I wish that book could be distributed as a tract. Somebody ought to strike off a million copies of it, and send a copy to every silly, bitter-minded, envious little goose in the world who drives her husband half mad because he can't buy her a limousine and provide her with a Summer home in Newport, or a cottage in the Berkshires, or a trip to Palm Beach in the Winter, or a run to California any season of the year.

And Then She Changed

What fools they are—such women as this—what cruel, shallow-hearted, worthless fools!

Now if this particular woman had settled down and looked facts in the face—how happy and thrifty and peaceful she and her husband and her son and daughter might have been.

But no—she must try to be something that she was not, though it killed her to be trying.

How silly it all is—the pretending and the struggling. I'd rather be a plain, clean, shining dishpan in a plain, clean, shining kitchen any day in a week, than to be a little nothing of a silly, toppling, make-believe vase that won't even hold water—to say nothing of a bouquet of flowers.

Wouldn't you?

MT. EVEREST CLIMBERS SEE GOAL IN SPRING

London, Oct. 21.—In Colonel Bury's fourteenth section of his Mount Everest narrative, written on September 24 and September 28, he picks up the story where he left off at the end of his twelfth article and gives details of the expedition's difficulties, which, however, were overcome to the extent of finding what seems to be a practical approach to the mountain, as told in his brief dispatch published on October 11.

As predicted here by scientists, the expedition hardly will be able to go farther until next Spring, and Colonel Bury's dispatch would seem to substantiate a report from similar sources, published here, to the effect that the expedition will return to Darjeeling the latter part of October.

It is considered here that members of the expedition have overcome the greatest difficulties in carrying their quest so far as they have. Though Colonel Bury only lightly touches upon it, the difficulties of climbing or even living at an altitude of 22,000 feet is within themselves a great handicap, as will be attested by any one who has suffered fatigue, nosebleed and thumping of the ears at less than 16,000 feet.

Students of the situation believe that if the expedition could find what its members believed to be a practical approach to Mount Everest under such trying weather conditions that when Spring comes they will reach their goal.

By Colonel Howard Bury,

Leader of Mt. Everest Expedition.

CAMP at 20,000 feet, Sept. 24, via Simla, Oct. 19.—On August 21, Messrs. Mallory and Bullock left Kharta for the advance base up the Kharta valley. Major Morshead and Mr. Wheeler followed on September 1 and were engaged in mapping the upper portions of the valley.

On September 3, Raeburn, Wollaston and myself also left Kharta, leaving only Sherpa Wandji, the interpreter, to look after the stores there and make arrangements to send up fresh vegetables, meat and tamps for the coolies.

Full of Hope

The weather had improved slightly and we were full of hope that the monsoon was ending, but the night before starting there was lightning, a most unusual feature at Kharta. The first part of the road up the Kharta valley is very well known. We passed through barley fields, now fast ripening and turning golden. Curious to relate, the barley, at 14,000 feet, was riper than that at 13,000 feet.

Passing the last house we pushed on for two miles, finally camping near the river on grassy flats carpeted with gentians, one a dark blue, with fan starlike petals. The weather was threatening and drizzly, but that did not prevent us from enjoying a bonfire of juniper after dinner, the last bonfire to be seen for many days.

The following day was wet at starting, with clouds low down in the valley, and still we saw much white and purple on the hillsides. After going a short way we passed the surveyors' camp for the weather had prevented their work. As we rose higher the rain became snow, and by the time we arrived at the advanced base camp it was snowing steadily.

Good Shelter

The camp is situated at an elevation of more than 17,000 feet in a small, grassy hollow with good shelter from the winds. From the camp on clear weather there is a fine view of Mount Everest westward and also of the big glaciated peaks northward. By the side of our tent was a regular Alpine garden with three kinds of gentians, lovely little white saxifrages inside of whose yellow cups were yellow and brown spots, pretty pink and orange, dwarf blue delphiniums with single deep blue flowers and light blue musk—scented delphiniums with an overpowering scent. The last named is said to be a great preventive against lice.

We had plenty of time to observe the animal life up here, for in the next few days the weather got decidedly worse. Every night there were two to six inches of snow, which rapidly melted in the daytime, when the snow changed to sleet and rain. Brilliantly colored birds were living here in the snow.

There were buntings with bright scarlet breasts and heads of beautiful red; start with red body and black and white wings and also a number of snow cock on the opposite side of the valley, but they were most wary, although excellent eating when a few came to the pot.
